A basic necessity

Mrs. Rachel Seeger, a West English teacher, said that she is concerned about the preparedness of today's English student. She feels that on the whole, students are less equipped in skills and vocabulary and that they are not as widely read as students should be. Dr. Malcolm Stern, chairman of West's English department, agreed with her. In Dr. Stern's opinion, the trend away from the classics was created by the sixties movement of "do your own thing."

He said that during the sixties, teachers allowed students to do what they wanted to and that they stressed student creativity rather than correctness.

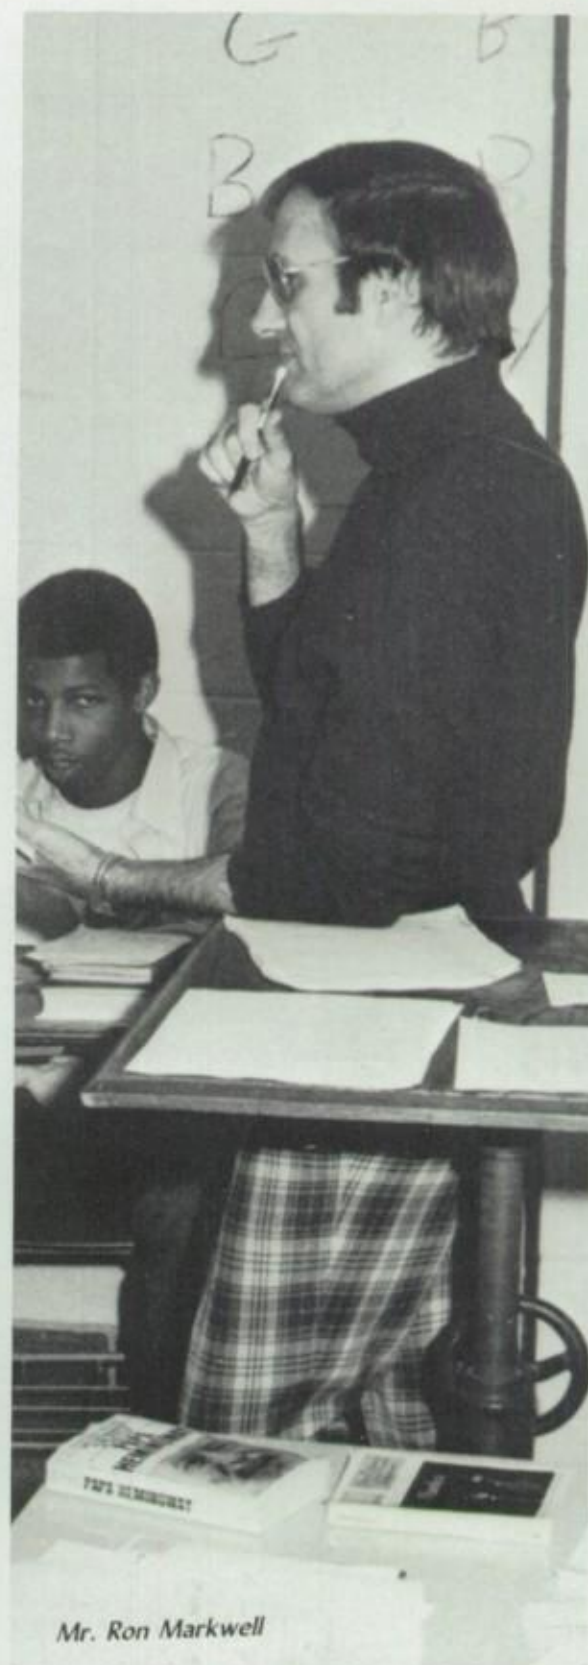

Since some students have not been taught the basics in grammar, some class time was spent covering that this year. Dr. Stern added that next year's Manual of Form and Style will have a new language handbook section added to help students with grammar problems and aid them in writing compositions.

Most teachers don't want to spend time on the grammatical fundamentals; they prefer teaching the enrichment of English literature. Dr. Stern said that it's nice having an occupation where he's able to read so much of the time and not feel guilty about it. Mrs. Seeger said that language is the "most meaningful subject to study in all of life." She compared language to food: "It's a basic necessity."

The "J" Room

European class: fun, historic

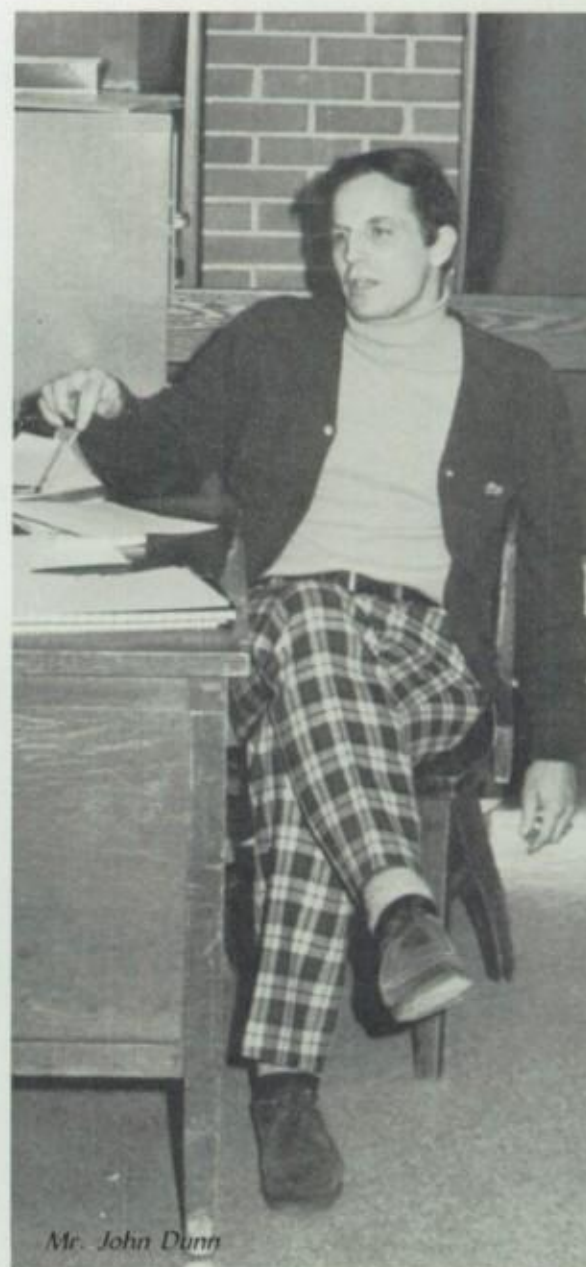

Because of lighter enrollment in European History AP, teachers were teaching some of the classwork out of the classrooms. Students in European History AP were treated to field trips to the Art Institute, a special showing of "King Richard III," and a performance of medieval choral arrangements from a small ensemble of ETHS choir members.

This feelings of active involvement was further expanded when the history department added a new course to its curriculum. European Travel Experience, a course relating to the study of foreign cultures, not only offered two history credits, but also five weeks in nine major European cities and cruises through the Greek Isles. Focusing on several points: architecture, art, food, religion, and social attitudes, the students came home from the trip with a better knowledge of the Renaissance period in Florence, Italy; medieval Roman attitudes on religion; and parliamentary and democratic systems of government from their beginnings in London and Athens, respectively. Others in the new course, European Travel Experience, commented that getting out and meeting people was the key to success in studying any subject, especially history.

C.S.: Kids realizing potential

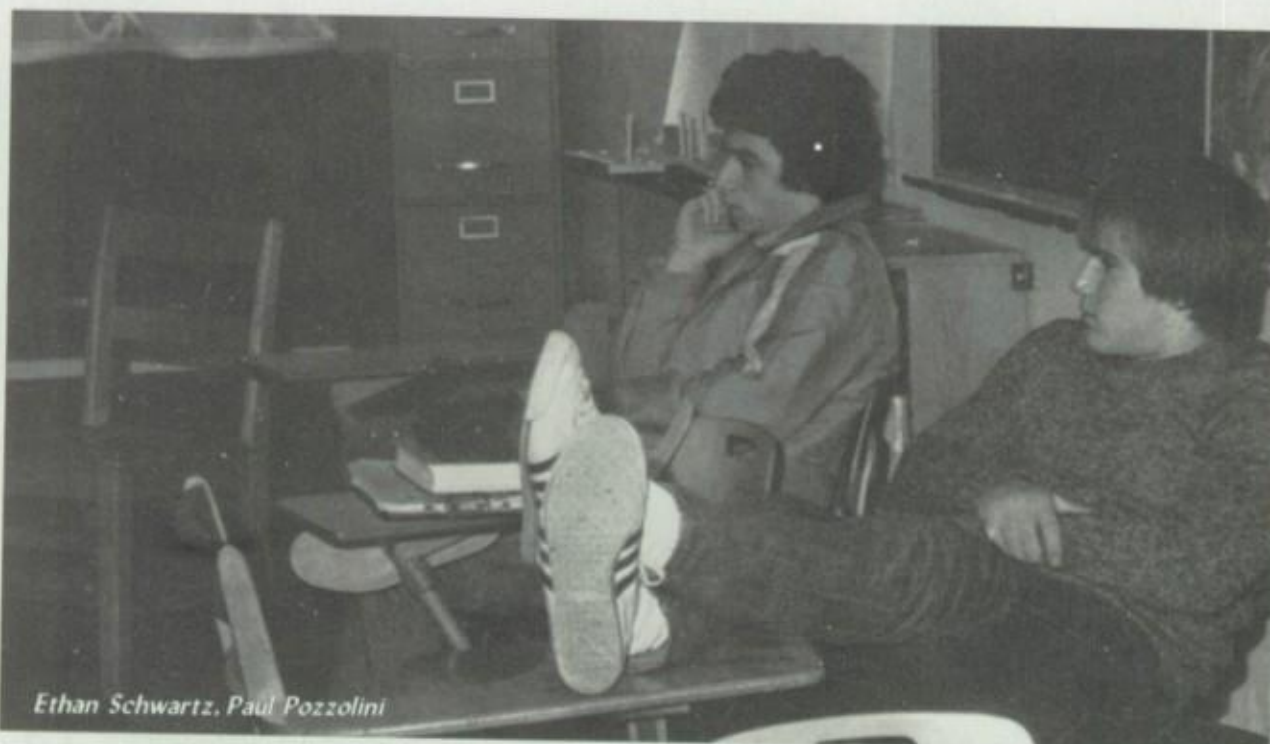

This year Combined Studies students had a greater opportunity to display their creativity.

One way in which C. S. students displayed their talent was the Festival of the Arts. The festival, initiated by the C. S. department, was a completely student-produced and student-written variety show. The festival showcased comedy sketches, popular music, poetry readings, and dance sequences.

Another outlet for C. S. students' creative talent was the Combined Studies Literary Magazine. This year all grade levels were involved in the publication of the magazine, which featured poetry, short stories, and art.

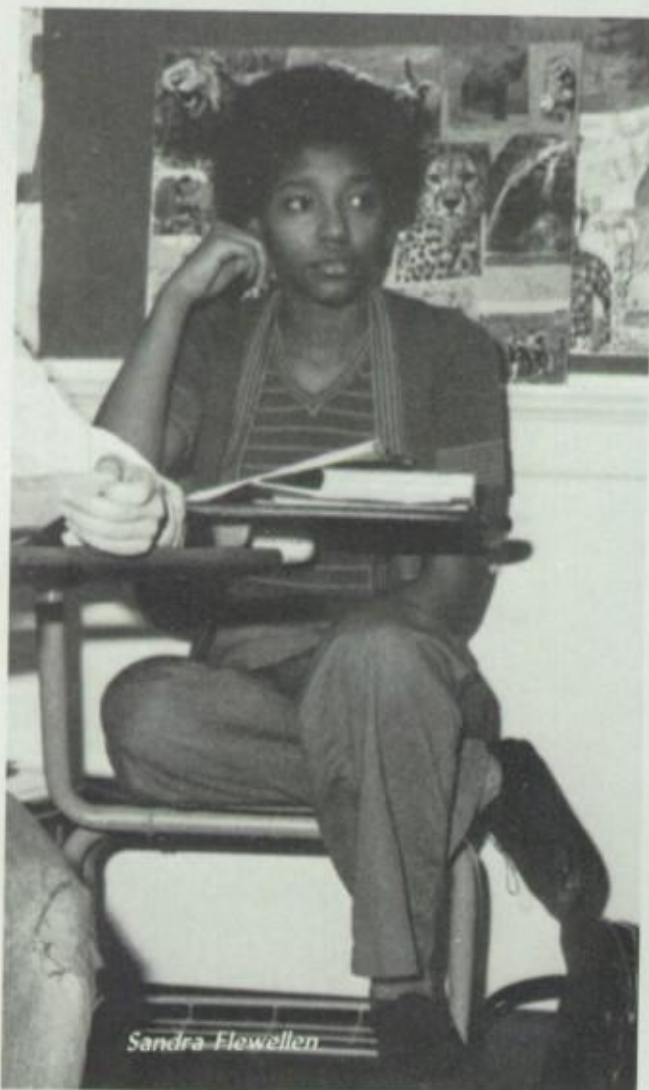

John Pinter, West senior, felt that more and more students finally realized that "the idea of taking English history together is a very fine one."

Science not just for brains

ETHS' science department offered a wide range of science courses in many different student interest areas, including horticulture, the study of plants, astronomy, the study of the stars, and physical and life sciences, which make all students aware of the tremendously important practical applications of science to modern society.

Of course, the science department felt the pinch of the school's most recent budget cuts. A lack of proper equipment and the loss of several teachers were just some restrictions imposed by ETHS' unstable financial situation. Crowded classrooms were another problem. "It's so crowded in my classroom, I can't even walk around because of all the desks!"

exclaimed one science teacher.

When students were asked whether it was love of science or the wrath of graduation requirements that prompted them to take science courses, most replied, "graduation requirements." Many seniors were taking science "because most of the colleges I've applied to recommend two years of science, at least." One West sophomore said, "Believe me, there is no love between me and my Biology class."

Students' skills strengthened

The math program at ETHS not only offered many ways for students to improve their mathematical abilities, but also introduced a way for students to use their math in a fun competition-oriented atmosphere.

Beverly Winters, Nadine West

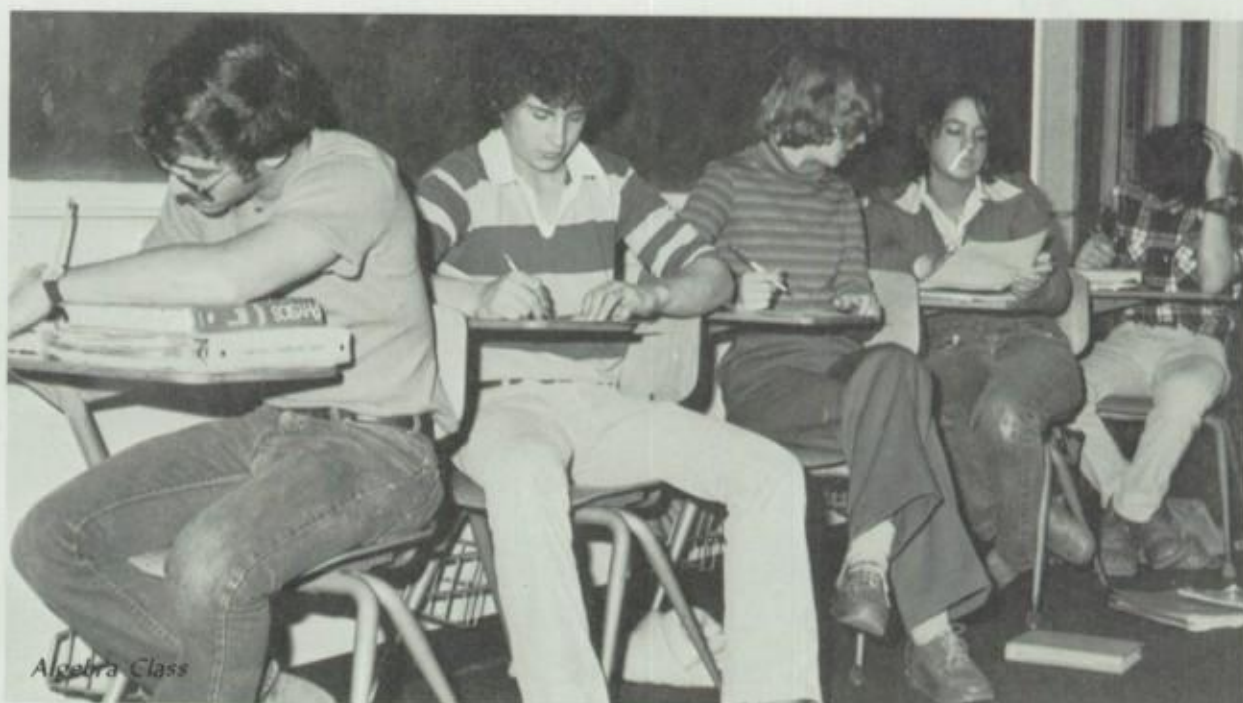

Mr. John Benson

One opportunity for improving math skills was the Title I program. This program, already in its second year, has helped a large number of students needing special attention in the math area. Ms. Marion Kelley, instructor of the program, explained that anyone wanting to brush up on skills or receive a little more help was given the chance to do so. The program mainly dealt with Algebra, but other courses in advanced math were also involved. It was open to any students at any grade level willing to improve their math ability during their own free mods.

Another place designed to help students with math difficulties was the Tutoring Center, which involved teachers as well as students in tutoring positions. These tutors came to the Center during free mods to explore any problems a student might be having with his math course.

The Mathletes was a fun new idea in the math department this year. Students tried out for the team by showing a proficiency in mathematics at various contests. Then out of these auditions, Mr. John Benson, sponsor, chose the most talented students to compete on the Mathletes team.

Language proficiency increases

Mr. Roland DuBosq, chairman of the West foreign language department, said, "To me, the role of the teacher is basically to get the student into meaningful contact with some portion of the non-material human heritage. The humanistic curriculum is not concerned with a living; it is concerned with having a reason for living in the first place."

Mr. DuBosq feels that a teacher is more than an instructional technician because of the interpersonal relationships between the teacher and the student. He feels that his main goal in teaching a foreign language is to increase the possible communication between people.

Ms. Marianne Rubin, Spanish

teacher, thinks that anything which awakens curiosity in the rest of the world is healthy, and she explains, "a foreign language does this." Ms. Rubin finds teaching a foreign language personally rewarding. "It's like giving someone a gift because they will appreciate it all their lives through a more fulfilled travel experience." She concludes that traveling is the most fabulous thing any person could ever do.

Co-ed gym: mixed feelings

The Title IX Program, which requires gym to be strictly co-ed by June of 1978, moved closer to actuality at ETHS. This year, more co-ed gym classes were offered.

The program, though, brought on mixed feelings. Students had varied reactions to it. Some felt the courses weren't structured enough, while others enjoyed the opportunity to socialize. Both GPE and BPE departments felt that the new program was a challenging and interesting experience.

As one East senior commented, "I'd really like to be around in '78 when the swim classes are co-ed." Another felt that co-ed gym was more of a joke rather than a gym class. Some students were worried about the quality of the classes in the future. "If they think that 'Social Dancing' is a gym activity then they're out of their minds! If gym is going to be a bunch of electives like that—what will happen to people interested in gymnastics and basketball?"

Ms. Leandra Mitrovic, GPE teacher, commented that she enjoyed teaching BPE classes because the guys tend to listen more to directions than the girls do. However, Mr. David Lindley, BPE teacher, expressed his aggravation between the vast difference of the GPE and BPE departments. "I really don't know what's going on," he said about teaching badminton to a gym full of girls.

Eventually, however, both students and teachers will have to think in terms of co-ed gym, as well as take part in it.

Going full force with communicating

The hammers and saws were always busily rattling away from behind the Upstairs Theater. Despite budget and staff cuts, the Speech Arts department was going full force this year. The season started out with the infamous YAMO, to go on from there with Tennessee Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire, Ken Kesey's One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, and Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Ernest, to name a few.

But behind all the glory of the lights and fame were the classroom and the teacher. Many classes specializing in oral communications were offered by the department. This year, each teacher was carrying a load of six classes. According to Ms. Margaret Crowley, the teachers requested an extra class to allow the students more opportunity for performance and critique.

Unfortunately, this limited the amount of time each teacher can donate to coaching students on the Speech and Debate teams. As a result, the more experienced students in these organizations devoted some of their time to help the teachers and fellow students. Not only did this add to their learning, but as Ms. Crowley said, "This kind of activity is essential to esthetic growth."

Enrollment down, materials up

Much to the disappointment of ETHS art teachers, enrollment in art courses was down this year. Even more distressing was the fact that students' attendance declined, too.

Ms. Nadine Pool, art teacher, explained that the art department was working with a smaller number of teachers than the year before. Because of the loss of instructors, the remaining art teachers taught six classes a day instead of the usual four or five classes.

Independent Study courses were also cut out of the art curriculum as art teachers were busy with scheduled classes and possessed no free time to guide students in the independent study areas. This course will also have to be withdrawn from the upcoming school year curriculum because teachers foresee no decrease in the amount of unscheduled time.

On a happier note, however, the majority of students polled felt that the art department was better supplied in materials this year. "Whenever I go to class, the materials are always there, ready for students' use," reported one West senior. "I feel I can become a better artist because the materials I need for a project are always handy."

Dept. boasts class

The Music Department was filled with many interesting classes this year. The most popular classes were: Rhythms, Scales, & Chords, Materials of Music, Electronic Music, and Contemporary Music.

In the Materials of Music class, students investigated several past and modern day composers. They compared their own techniques with those of famous composers. This gave them a new outlook on how to incorporate the two different skills to create original work. However, no one felt pressured to produce great masterpieces. As Dr. Richard Rosewall, music instructor, commented, "Our object is not to make little Mozarts out of all the students in the class."

The Electronic class concentrated on putting sounds together. This type of composition differed from that of the Materials class. The students put their finished products on recording tape instead of paper. This class gave many students an opportunity to express themselves in a way other than regular composition.

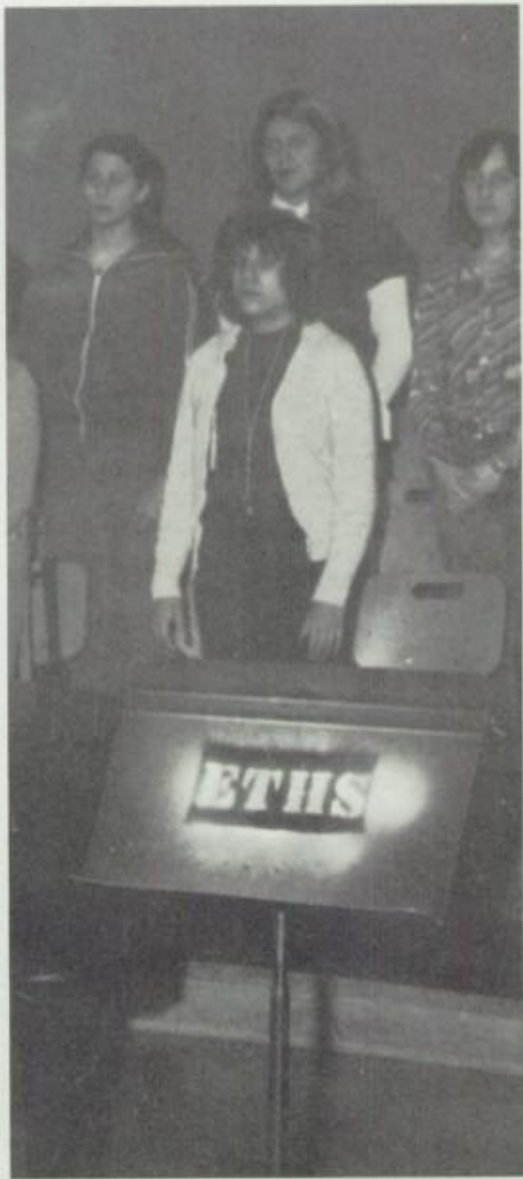

Students become involved in music, whether it was creating sounds or learning about them. ETHS boasted of a music class to fit any musical interest.

Staff cuts don't lower enrollment

The males of this school were slowly working their way to the top of the class in home economics. These students could be found alongside the female majority studying everyday living, such as child-rearing, cooking, and future careers.

Even with the larger enrollment of boys in home ec. classes, the department suffered a loss of one teacher. As a result, the nursery school enrollment for the Child Study Experience class was limited to the afternoon. Despite the disadvantages brought upon the teachers and students, Ms. Ruth Wheeler said, "This class has been the best of my twenty-four years at ETHS."

If you have happened to notice a little green house behind the school, you can be proud to know it was built by ETHS students in the mid-forties. At that time, the industrial arts department offered only a wood-working course and auto mechanics class. But the department has come a long way since then and this year offered courses all the way from photography to architectural drawing.

Despite one staff cut, enrollment was at its peak, and Mr. William Clanton, the department head, anticipated further growth next year.

Big deal behind the wheel

This year, the Driver's Education Department devised a new schedule which enabled the classes to provide more traffic experiences than ever before. If a student in the past felt that he wasn't getting enough practice, this year's program helped take away that worry.

"My first impression of Driver's Education was one of pure boredom. But with the new scheduling, I got to really enjoy the class. I felt more confident behind the wheel because I had had more driving experience," said West junior Susan Barry.

As many students have expressed in the past, there is no better way to learn how to drive than actually doing it. This year's traffic schedule took these needs into consideration, and really helped to provide the necessary experience for the driving student.

The student taking health, on the other hand, found no new schedules or programs to help relieve the "sometimes" boring class.

Health Education, a required one-semester course, covered such topics as teenage alcoholism, drug abuse, and Sigmund Freud. Said Carol Kenna, East junior, "The teachers really make you work for a grade."

Business Ed offers jobs

After four years at ETHS, many students continue their education and go to college. But, as Ms. Julie Thomas, business education teacher, pointed out, "Some students feel that college is not for them." So that is why ETHS offered a wide assortment of business classes that assist the student in selecting an occupation which offers a promising future.

Office Occupations, Distributive

Education, Diversified Occupations, and Vocational Experience are courses that combine classroom instruction with on-the-job training. Along with in-school studies, each student is expected to work at a business enterprise from 15-20 hours per week.

Cosmetology is a course that gives a student a chance to become a licensed beautician. A two year program, it consists of attending school in the morning and an off-campus beauty school in the afternoon.

Health Occupations is another course that requires students to take required classes at ETHS in the morning and work in the afternoons. Some possible places of employment for on-the-job training include hospitals, nursing homes, pharmacies, and veterinary clinics.

Ms. Thomas pointed out that most of the work-study programs are very successful. "I'm sure that more students would become interested in the courses, once they learned what they are all about."

Experience main goal in seminar

Learning through experience is the idea behind the ETHS Senior Seminar program. Students actually live their education instead of only having it presented to them in a classroom situation.

The course's curriculum is divided into many units: a unit on farm life in which students actually live on a farm in northern Wisconsin for 17 days, a unit on working in which students are required to hold a full time job for three weeks, a unit on living in Chicago where students go out and interview different Chicagoans, and a unit on politics.

Although the program does not involve as many conventional academic activities as other classes, Senior Seminar teacher Bill Leonard feels that it is of great educational value. "People become involved in their own education . . . and education becomes more of a real thing for them," he said.

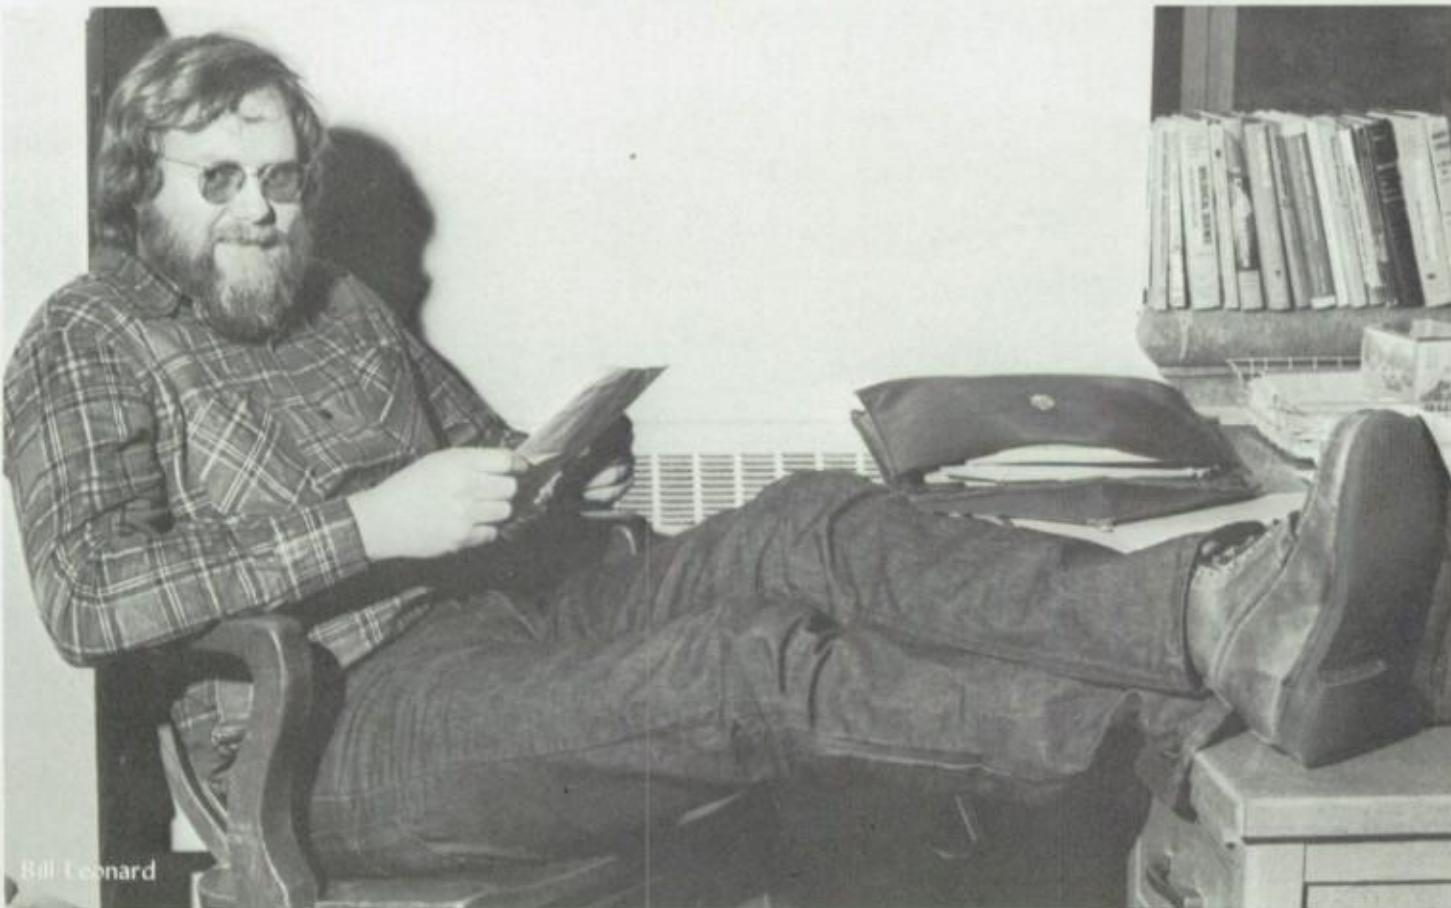

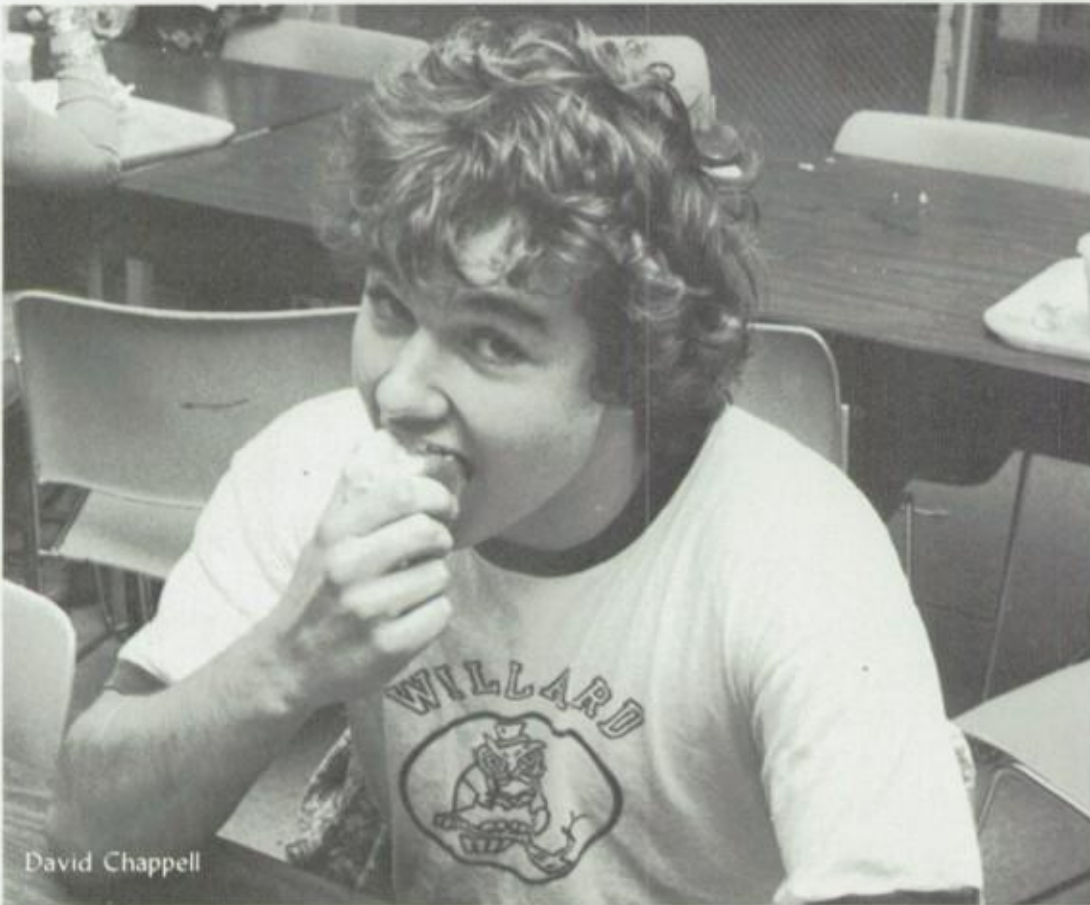

He added that another factor that helps make seminar successful is that it involves many people from the community who have something to offer students. "I could tell you all about accounting," explains Mr. Leonard, "but if an accountant told you about it, or if you worked in his office, it'd be much better."

Counsel, counselors, counseling

The reorganization of four schools into two schools caused mass confusion to many students this year. "Where is my counselor?" students inquired. "Last year she was in Michael; this year she's in Boltwood." Despite the many barriers associated with change, the counselors did a tremendous job of getting to know their new students and helping them adjust to the change.

The two schools, East and West, had totally different set-ups. East school had freshmen and juniors in the Beardsley section and sophomores and seniors in the Michael section. "The change helps me deal with unique problems of that particular class," said Ms. Veronica Lindsey, East Counselor.

West school was divided into three divisions. Boltwood and Bacon division had 900-1000 students each, and West Central had 400. This system stressed individualization and was aimed at providing better personal services.

The counselors worked hard this year to create a closer relationship with their students, and many student/counselor assemblies were planned.

Shelved with pride

It was spring, and everyone—teachers, students, school staff, and librarian had the fever usually attributed to that season. In the Resource Centers and the Central Reference Center, students clumped, buzzing around secluded cubicles. The clumps tended to become more apparent around April, May, and June.

The busiest time of the day was 3-4. "The computer did something to us," said Mrs. Stone, West RC. It seems an overwhelming percentage of the students were unscheduled at this time. "By and large," continued Mrs. Stone, "the students used the Resource Centers well."

Miss English, West RC, noted that the study and research areas "needs to have more feedback, an improvement of communication . . . we need to get the students involved more." One way this was accomplished was the use of student volunteers who donated their free time to helping in the centers.

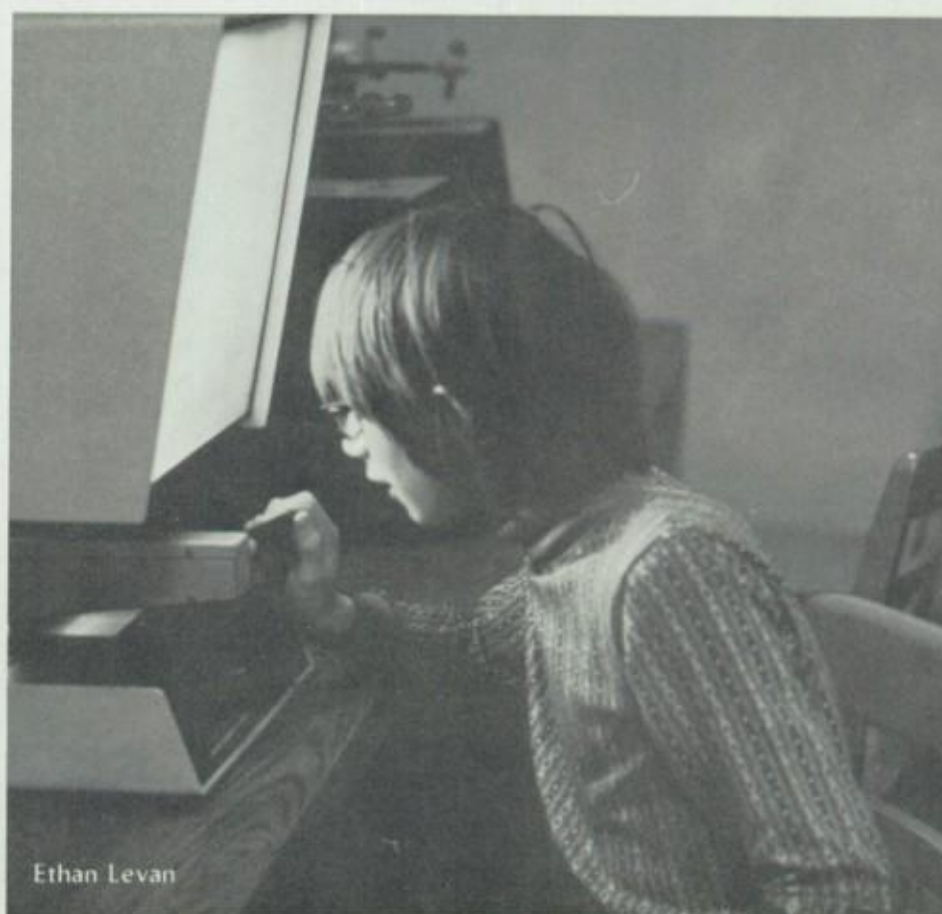

All the Resource Center librarians love working with students and teachers; "We are here to give service to students and teachers . . . we like them and they like us," replied Miss English.

Security works for safety

This year, the security guards had more help with monitoring the hallways and patrolling school grounds. More hall guards and student hall monitors were recruited to lessen the overpowering responsibility of keeping EHTS safe.

One way in which security guarded the school from theft and other possible danger, was requesting that every student leaving school early carry a mandatory

"leave early" pass. Once this pass was received from the office, a student carried the pass all year long and was allowed to leave school before 3:15 pm.

One security guard stated that theft was the crime which kept security guards the busiest at EHTS. This winter, some $2,500-$3,000 in merchandise (mostly down jackets and vests) was stolen from school lockers.

ACTIVITIES

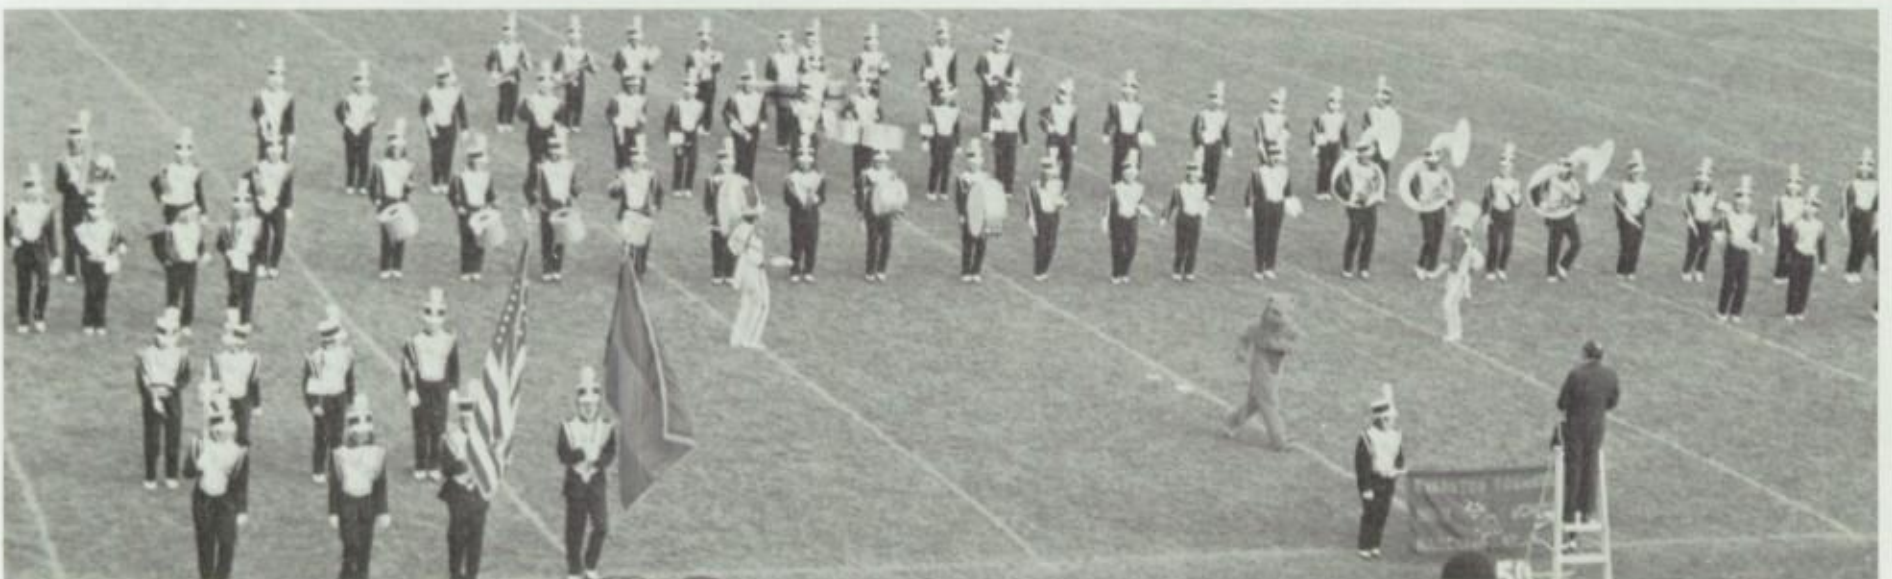

Homecoming in blue (and orange)

The hallways were trimmed in festive orange and blue as Homecoming once more came to ETHS. Besides the yearly tradition of crowning kings and queens for Homecoming, the first dance in over six years was held in honor of this special occasion. Said a West senior, "Kids' interest in their school is at a real peak this year. I know that when I'm just walking down the halls, I can feel the enthusiasm in the air. The dance is a great idea!"

However, spirit alone doesn't win a football game. A thrilling touchdown by the Wildkits in the first 30 seconds of the game only led to disappointment as New Trier East completely dominated the field for the remainder of the game. Said varsity linebacker, Larry Axelrood "It wasn't because we played so badly that we lost. New Trier (East) just picked up on every mistake that we made and made it count for them."

Anon not like any other

This year's YAMO began performing the first of its ten scheduled showings in the Upstairs Theatre on October 10. Entitled "Anon the Brighter Side," YAMO '76 boasted more subtle humor than ever before.

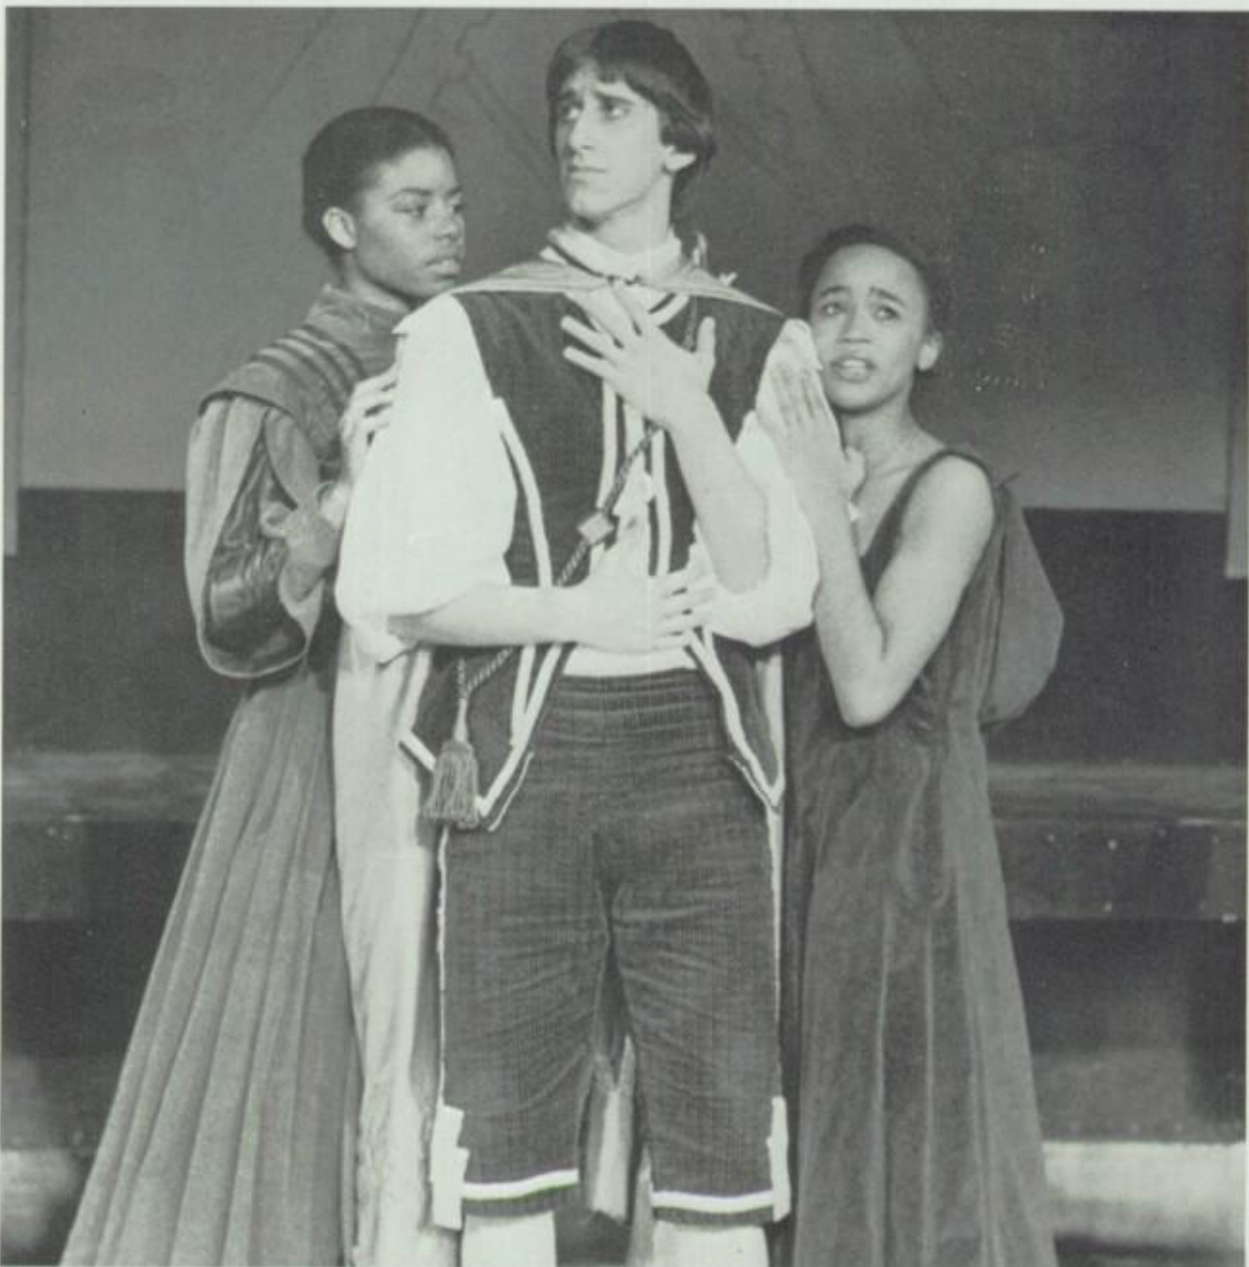

"Anon" incorporated two themes throughout the entire show: Bicentennialism and Shakespeare. Another added feature in this year's show was having more full-cast numbers, as well as keeping the ever popular pantomime skits and slide projections.

The entire opening consisted of historic figures running up on stage—looking important enough to explain exactly why we celebrated a bicentennial—and an announcer saying why there wouldn't be a bicentennial opening this year. Not only did the cast do spoofs on channel changing TV news, but also ETHS' revised school system after budget cuts.

The first act's finale, "Guys and Dills," featured such characters as Vito "the Vegetarian" Garbanzo, Elliot Loch Ness, the Inedibles, the Green Goddess, and Hedda Lettuce. Taking place during a time period when salad bars are prohibited by law, the sketch ended with Loch Ness & his Inedibles in triumph over Vito & his Molls.

But, of course, the whole highlight of "Anon the Brighter Side" was the finale, "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark!," billed as a musical comedy. Hamlet and the court sang and danced their way through insanity, a couple of murders, and night visits from a few ghosts. Also in attendance at curt was a troupe of slapstick comedians: Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Leonard, virī primi ridiculi.

All in all, YAMO '76 once again proved that a show completely written and produced by students can be an entertaining experience.

Streetcar strikes stage

Tennessee Williams' play "A Streetcar Named Desire" struck the Upstairs Theatre stage December 1-4. This particular streetcar picked up and carried its audience for a tense and highly emotional ride. The cast conducted this streetcar with a sincerity which gave the audience a truly meaningful experience.

"A Streetcar Named Desire" is an extremely challenging play to perform. Paul Haskin, who played the role of Mitch, said, "The production of 'Streetcar' would be challenging to any actor, much less actors in high school."

"Rehearsals were often long and grueling because every character is so complex and difficult," remarked Libby Churchill, who played the part of Stella.

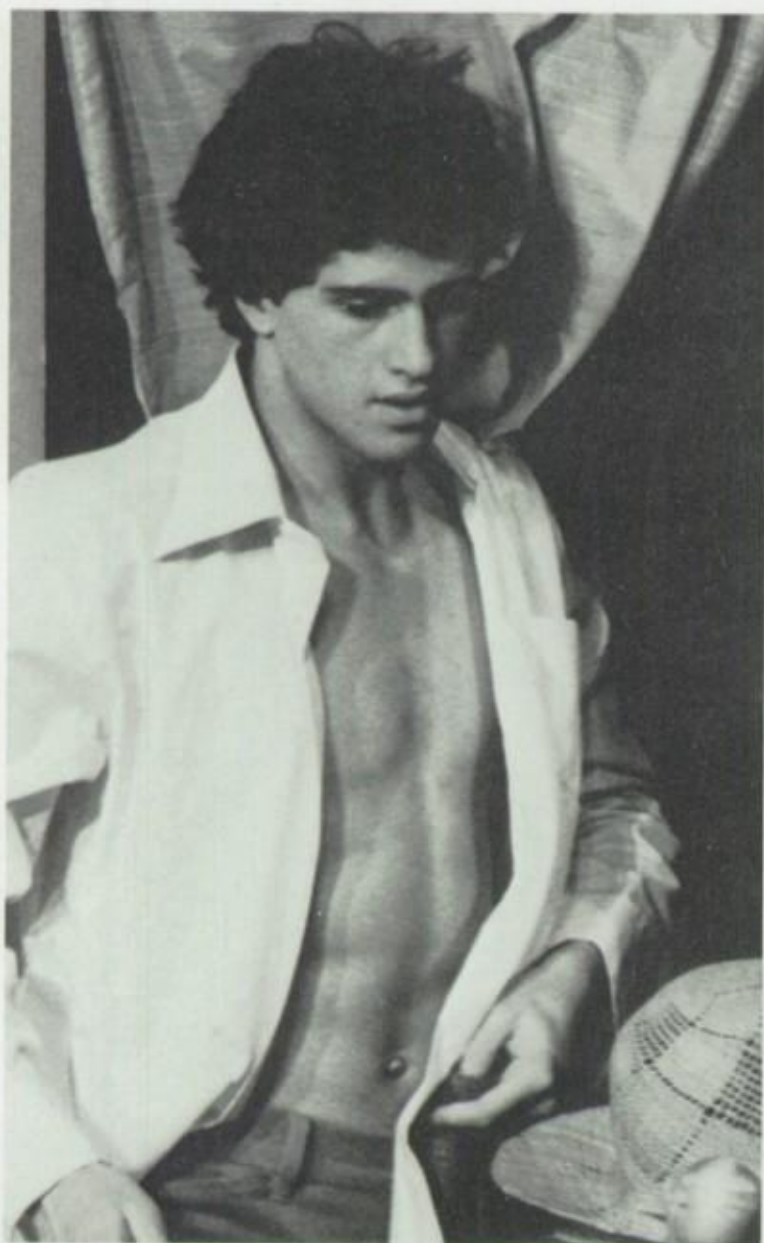

Beth Fredrick, who played Blanche

Dubois, replied, "I found myself devoting all my free time to the development of Blanche's character."

There was no doubt, however, that Peter Rosenblum captured the essence of his character, Stanley Kowalski. Peter interpreted Kowalski as a loud, rough brute, not beyond smashing dishes on the kitchen floor or maliciously badgering his sister-in-law.

Mr. William Ditton, the director, concluded that Stanley finally destroys Blanche, "by forcing her to see the truth about herself and the world around her."

For the most part, those who caught Williams' "Streetcar," felt the ride was well worth the fare.

Carolers bring cheer

What's the best way to learn every Christmas carol ever written or sung in the history of mankind? Go to the ETHS Holiday Music Festival, of course. On December 10 and 11, every conceivable Christmas carol created—even the most obscure—was performed in one form or another, especially in that time-worn favorite, the Christmas medley.

Instrument ensembles that performed at the concert included Symphonic Band, Concert Band, and Cadet Band; the Concert Orchestra; Flute, Woodwind, Percussion, and Brass Choirs; and "Jazz Back." The performances of the Morning and Afternoon Chorales, Choiristers, Chorus, and Mastersingers also helped usher in the Christmas season.

For variety, several marches, non-carols, and "year round" orchestra selections were performed. Said one ETHS Choir member, "This year's holiday concert was the best in years. The reason, I think, had to do with the wide selection of songs, and because of the spirit every performer showed in the concert."

Highlights included the search for the missing chair of the symphonic band member (unknown to the audience, of course), and the dazzling performance of the Male Chorus: the first chorale group ever to hit more incorrect than correct notes.

Amahl and friends visit

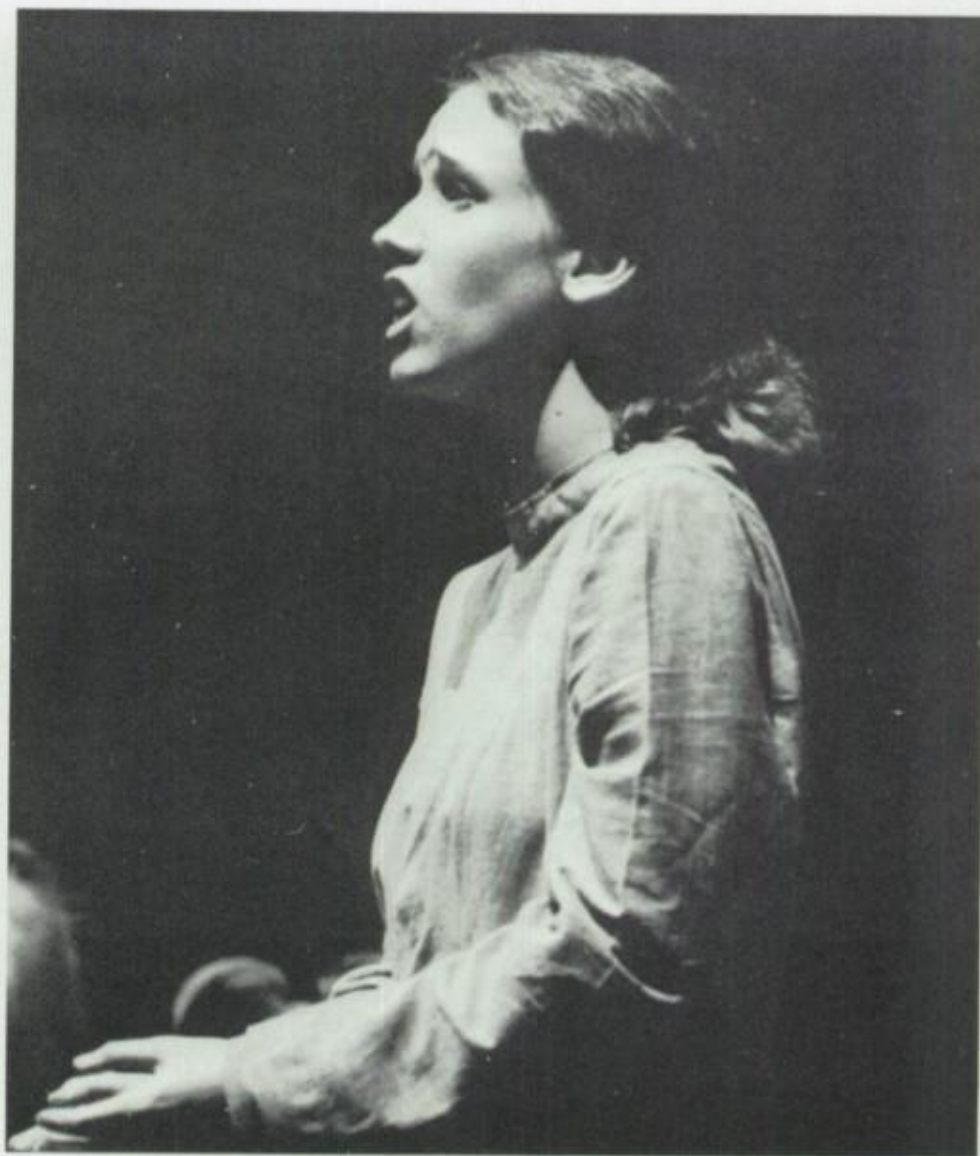

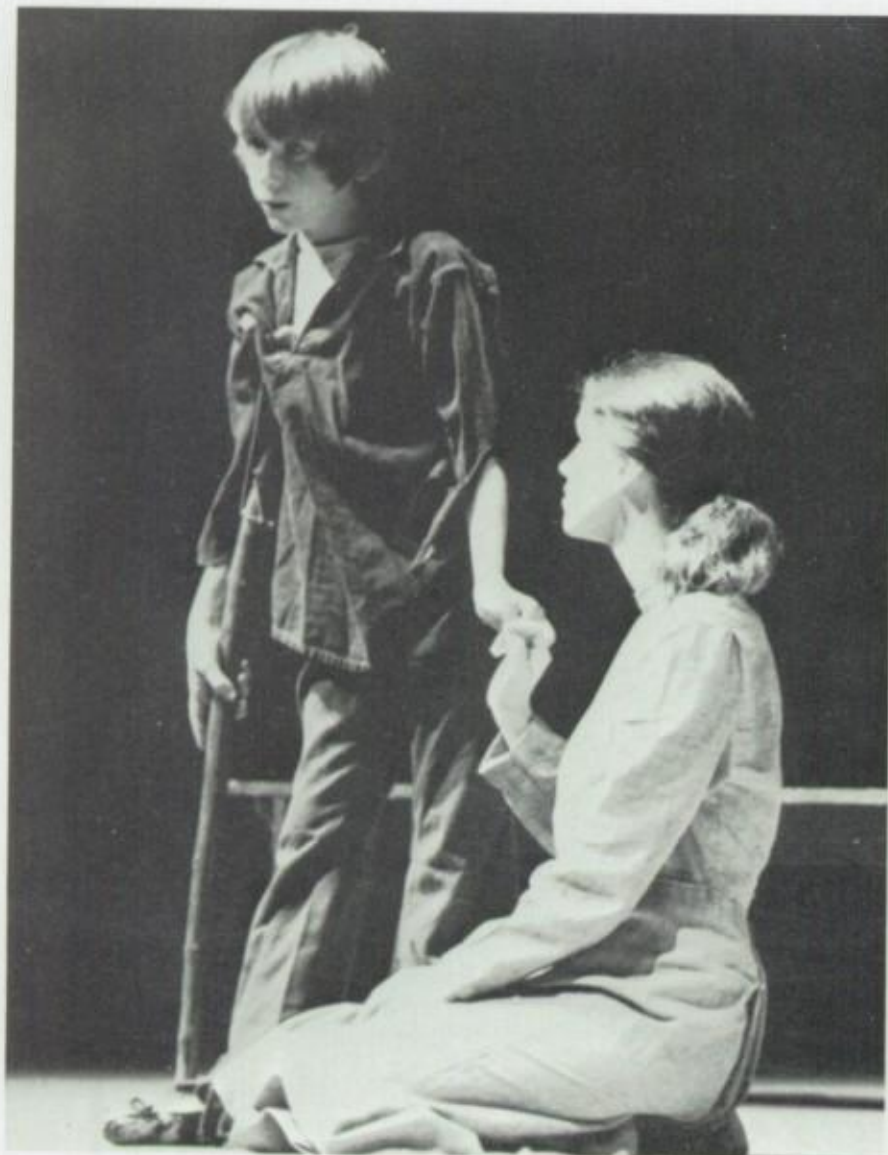

"I hate operas—at least that's what I thought until I saw 'Amahl.' The worst part of seeing operas is that they're always in foreign languages like Italian or French. That's why I was so surprised when I liked 'Amahl.' The plot and the singing were excellent. The best thing about it, though, was that it was all in English!"

This West senior's comments praised the ETHS Choir's December performance of "Amahl and the Night Visitors," a Christmas opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti. The opera is the story of a young crippled boy named Amahl and his mother, who are visited by the three kings on their way to the birth of Christ.

Because she is so poor, the mother has her friends and nearby shepherds bring food for the three guests. Later, to save her starving child, Amahl, the mother attempts to steal some of the gold the kings are bringing to Christ. Caught by a page, she is ashamed of her action. Amahl, a boy who has before always lied and been unhappy, offers to give Christ his crutch as a gift. In the act of giving, he stands without his crutch. The kings leave the mother the gold, and take Amahl with them so he may give Christ his gift, and thank him for the miracle.

Double cast for its two performances, adult roles were performed by ETHS Choir members. A sixth and seventh grader, both from Haven Middle School, performed the part of Amahl.

Guest conductor performs

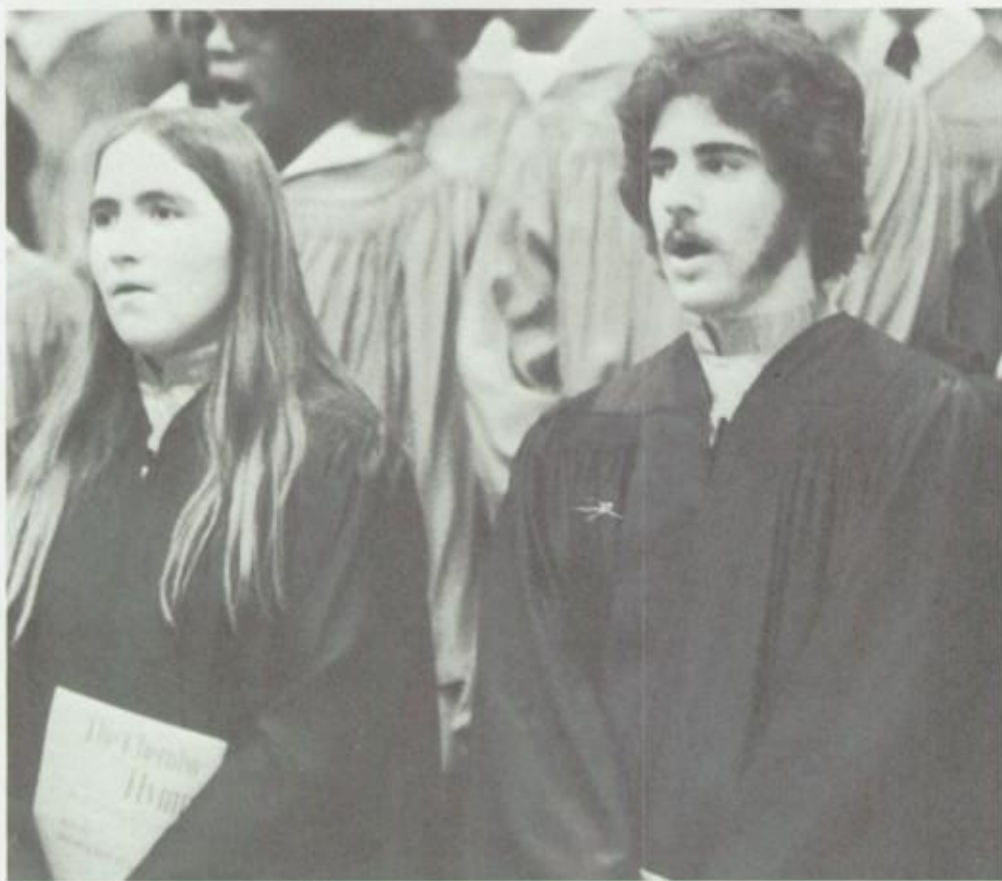

One time ETHS Orchestra Director Traugott Rohner guest-conducted the ETHS Symphony Orchestra at its Winter Concert on January 21. His welcomed appearance was the result of the ETHS Music Department's efforts to bring in distinguished conductors to work with ETHS music ensembles. Rohner taught music at ETHS from 1937-58. "The Instrumentalist," a magazine for school band and orchestra directors; "Claver," a magazine for pianists and organists; and two national music awards were all initiated by Rohner.

Rohner conducted the orchestra in Schubert's "Symphony in B Minor." Senior soloist Tamberlynn Gearing performed "Un Bel Di" from "Madame Butterfly" by Puccini and senior soloist Peter Coope performed "The Oboe Concerto in C Major" by Mozart.

Other orchestra selections included "The Overture to Don Giovanni" by Mozart and "Dance of the Tumblers" by Rimsky-Korsakov. The Chamber Strings played "The Concerto All'Unisono in D Major" by Dall'Abaco. Ending the Orchestra, ETHS Choir, and Chorales playing Howard Hanson's "Song of Democracy."

One flew east; one flew west

It was the final performance: the actors were sweating from their output of energy and the audience was holding its breath for the end. Chief Bromden climbed out the window, the lights flashed, the alarms sounded, Dale Harding led his friends in a defiant song, and the spotlight rested on the body of the hero, McMurphy. The lights faded and the overwhelmed spectators rose from their seats, applauding even before the curtain call had begun. The play, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, was to become a classic in the history of ETHS theater.

How did B. K. Siewerth, director of Cuckoo's Nest, choose the script? "I like plays that show man's struggle to maintain or to deal with his identity . . ." He then added with a frown, "I guess I always pick the most challenging plays."

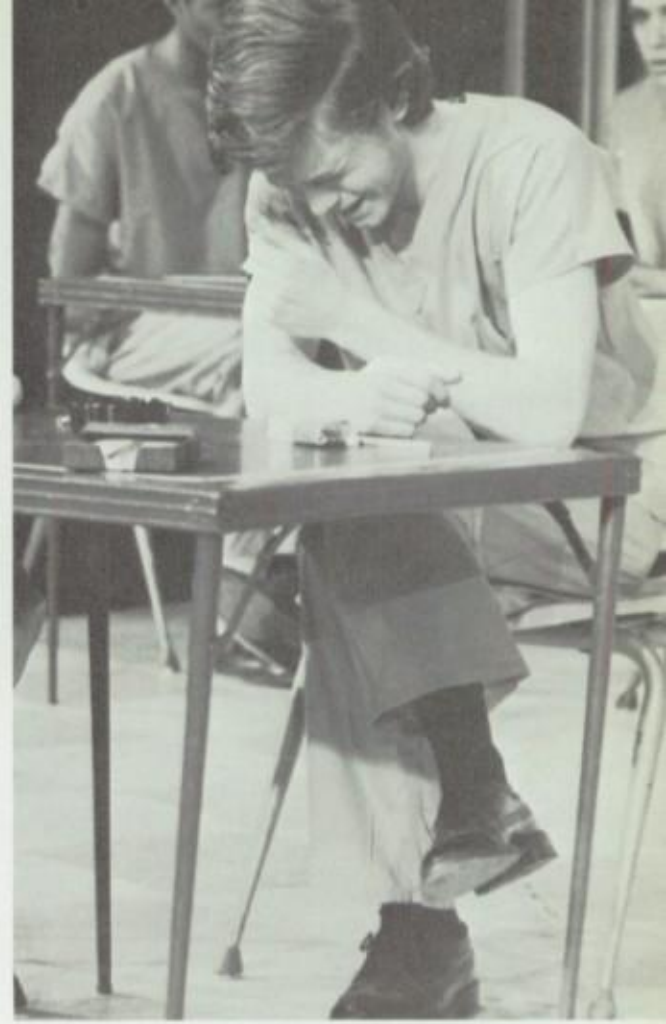

Certainly from the actor's viewpoint, this was true. Michael Engler stated that McMurphy was the hardest role he had ever portrayed because it was so unlike him. Possibly more difficult, though, were the parts of the psychotics of the ward. With great credibility, the actors played these parts. They drew the audience into the tragedy of the situation, and elevated them to the close of the performance. Mr. Siewerth said that there was very little trouble with the development and maintenance of these characters. "They are so into what they're doing and what is happening," he said.

Hours of hard, grueling work went into the creation of the "day-rom." The goal for the set of Cuckoo's Nest was to present a "sterile, harsh, unyielding" atmosphere that would be totally realistic. Said Peter Salem, assistant to Mr. Siewerth, "It will be very depressing to strike the set," as it always is. The pounding of hammers and the crash of wood echoed the words, "One flew east, one flew west, and one flew over the cuckoo's nest."

Esande performing feats

"We're going to have a show that appeals to a variety of tastes," promised Ms. Beverly Williams, dance instructor and sponsor. This year's Esande production did just that as it showcased dances ranging from classical ballet to modern Jazz.

Esande performed their annual show on March 17-19 in the Upstairs Theatre. Entitled "Feats," the show featured the whole case in a dance guest choreographed by Ginger Farley, ETHS 76, and a duet by East junior Vicki Anderson and the only male Esande member, David Miller. As Vicki replied, "David knows what he wants and I choreograph it. He's really very helpful."

The traditional senior dance was also another highlight of "Feats." The senior dance is a number choreographed and performed by the senior members of Esande.

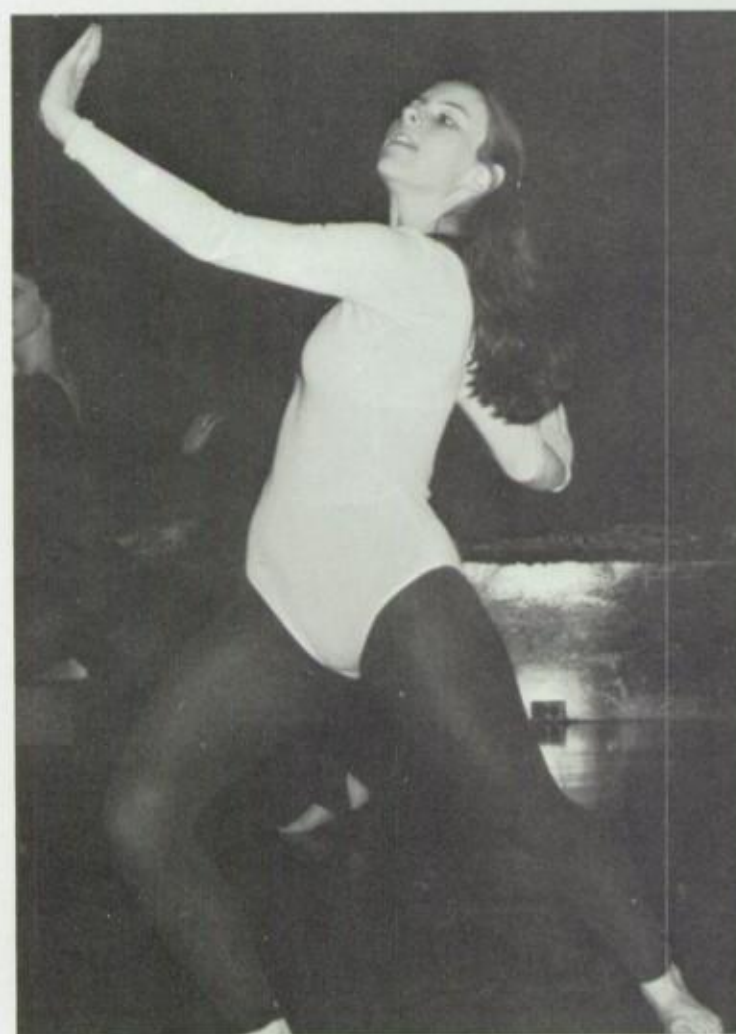

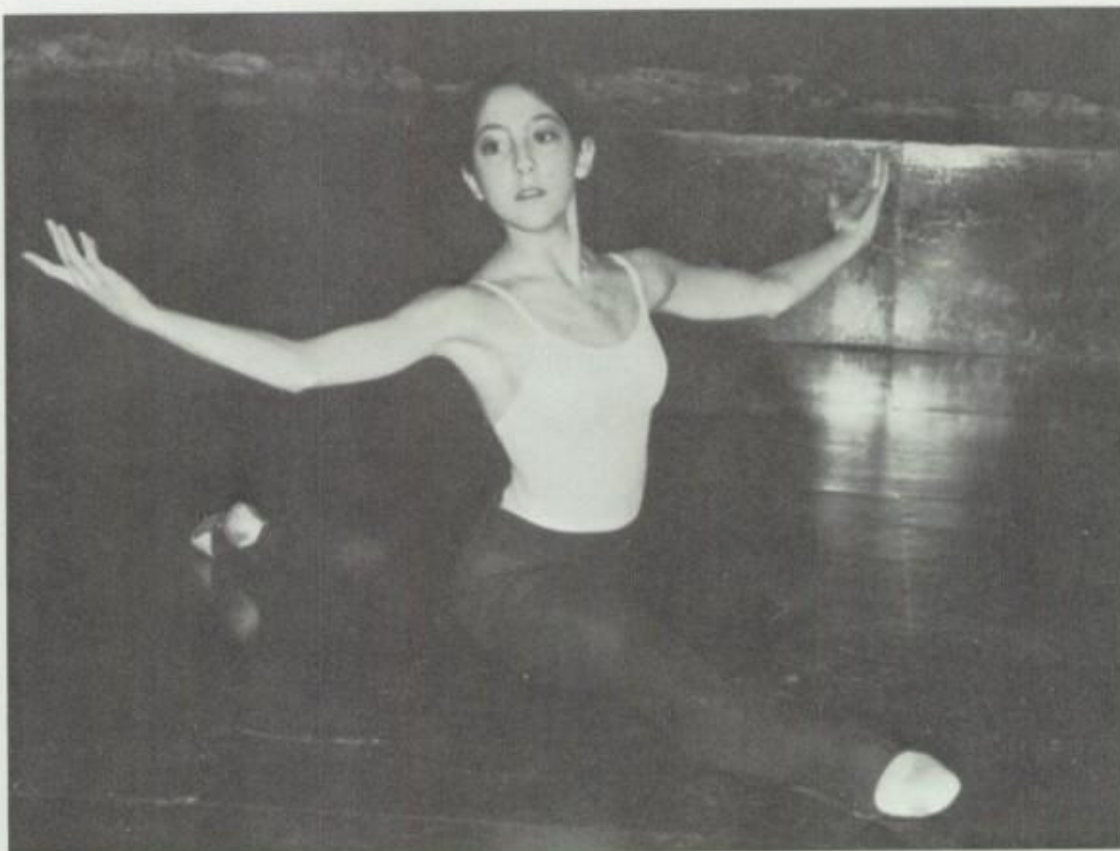

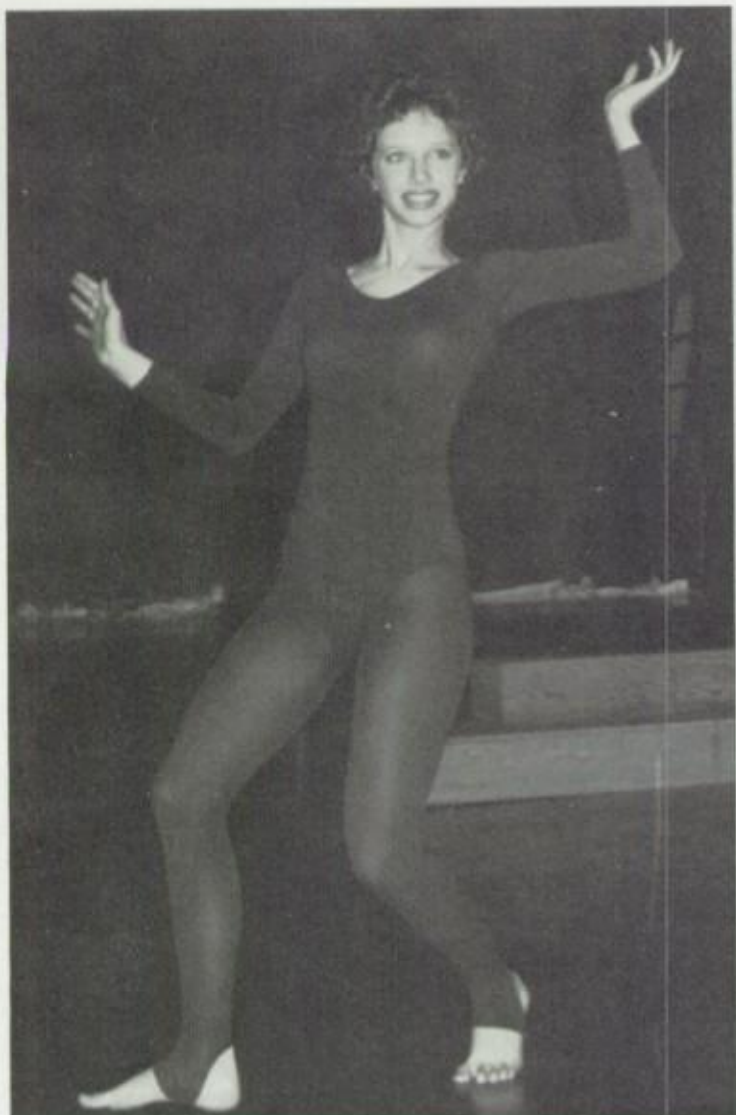

A new six-member Esande Board was formed this year to help with the production of "Feats" and try to iron out the problems the show usually faced in previous shows. Said board member Claudia Stone, "We're dealing with publicity and just generally helping Ms. Williams out with the tedious work."

Taking it from the top

Who ever thought that dancers would blossom out of the depths of the ETHS swimming pool? Much to the amazement of students a flock of mermaids and a bevy of mermen made their way to the surface of the rippling blue waters in their annual production, Take It From The Top.

Their theme was entertainment, and entertain they did, with music from popular old Broadway shows, a brilliant collection of costumes and the pure fascination of watching ballet in water.

Under the direction of Ms. Marion Kelly and Ms. Andrea Nocchiero, the Aquettes team began workouts in October, and started planning their numbers in January for the performances in April. Said one East school sophomore, "There was nothing I didn't like about it, except maybe the cold water." Other team members said they enjoyed meeting new people. Kathleen Dodson, a Junior, said that what she liked most about Aquettes was the fact that after working hard on a particular piece, "there's always something to end up with." Or as Laurel and Hardy once said, "Take it from the Bottom an we'll finish on Top!"

Showcase offers showbook

The annual production of Writer's Showcase was presented on April 20, 21, 22, and 23 in the Little Theatre. Entitled "They do it all with Mirrors," the show's theme was "Anticipation and Remembrance." A confidential interview with the pea who was responsible for keeping the princess awake was just one of the many highlights found throughout the performance.

For the first time in the history of Writer's Showcase, a booklet containing all creative writing showcased in "Mirrors" was offered at the end of each night's performance. Not only did the booklet serve as an added memento for Showcase viewers, but also provided an additional revenue for the financing of next year's show.

Over 400 pieces of student writing were submitted to the Showcase Board in the fall. Out of these 400 stories, poems, or skits, the Board chose 21 selections by 19 different student writers to be showcased.

The nine cast members worked hand in hand with Showcase director, Rachel Mikva, and producer, Michele Gazzolo, as well as faculty sponsors, Mr. David Foote and Ms. Jacqueline Pettiford, to present one of the best productions of Writer's Showcase ever performed at ETHS.

"Earnest," "Pirates," "Children"

Every year at ETHS, music and acting are combined to produce an all-school musical. This year the ears of students and faculty were treated with a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, Pirates of Penzance. "Mr. William Ditton, director, said it was chosen because of the relative simplicity of the production. And simple it was. All the audience was required to do was sit back and enjoy the fun of a tale of pirates, orphans, and beautiful young maidens.

The leads of Frederick and Mabel were handled by Kathleen Dodson and Janet Jacobs in the part of the heroine; Dean Olson and Brian Bruce shared the hero, Frederic. These four, each paired in their respective casts, sang their way through every crisis that developed within this delightful story.

The second production in Festival '77 was Oscar Wilde's hilarious The Importance of Being Earnest. Directed by B. K. Siewerth and assisted by Elizabeth Levin, the production featured turn of the century costumes and a lavish set, complete with an antique victorian print in Act One and real "foliage" for the garden in Act Two.

The play received many cuts to help speed up the pacing; still it flowed smoothly and amusingly along. Much of the humor was due to the interpretations of the characters by the actors, most notably, Frier McCollister as Algernon Moncrieff, Michael Engler as John Worthing, Barbara Baker as Lady Bracknell, and Jared Moses as Merriman.

The third production in the speech art department's Festival '77 was the all-black improvisation Let the Children Play. Directed by ETHS' resident playwright Sincere Thunder, the show featured the use of improvisation along with scripted passages and many hauntingly melodious songs.

Showcasing year round efforts

The weekend of June 3rd was the last time for the Music Department to assemble its talent and put on a concert. The evening's performances ranged from beginning players and singers to the most virtuosic talents.

Among the bands performing were: the Symphonic Band, the Cadett Band, the ETHS Orchestra, and the Jazz Band. One highlight of the evening was the Jazz Band's rendition of "Proud Mary."

The Music Department's best voices were also heard. Among the singing groups performing were: the Chorus, the Morning Chorale, the Afternoon Chorale, the Choristers, the Master Singers, and the ETHS Choir.

Showcased in the program were two senior soloists: Edward Cheng and Nozomi Terao. Edward played violin; Nozomi played the concert piano.

Also showcased in the Spring Concert was the premiere performance of "Kyrie," written by the winning contestant of the Sadie Rafferty Award.

Named the Key in 1951, ETHS' yearbook has since seen a lot of changes. First published as a yearbook/newspaper, the Key is now a photojournalistic essay capturing the highs and lows of high school life. Student editors and their staffs are responsible for the difficult step-by-step processes it takes to compile a book of the Key's stature. Although all work on the yearbook is extra-curricular, every person involved with the Key's publication is extremely dedicated.

This year, the senior editors attended a yearbook conference in New York City at Columbia University. Accompanied by Mr. Robert Roth, Key adult advisor, and Ms. Marily Morgan, East English teacher, the group spent three days attending seminars and workshops dealing with the various aspects of yearbook publication. Said copy editor, Barb Bennet, "It was an educational experience to see other students from different parts of the country and get new ideas from the award-winning yearbooks there."

The Key faced a major problem when American Photo Corp., the yearbook's photography company, declared bankruptcy. As Mr. Roth stated, "At first I was going to have a heart attack because I thought there wasn't going to be a yearbook this year. Luckily, American said they'd honor our contract, and I was really relieved."

Marching for victory

Under the direction of Mr. William Idle and Mr. Don Owens, the Symphonic, Concert, and Cadet Bands did a fine job performing this year. The Jazz Band, under the direction of Mr. Owens, featured Evan Ziporyn, Larry Bard, and John McGahan performing original compositions at the Jazz Band Concert.

The Marching Band, directed by Mr. Idle, marched at all of the home football games and they also marched during the Memorial Day parade. The Pep Band, made up of students from several different school bands, played at most of the home basketball games.

The bands performed in four concerts this year: the Holiday Festival, the Sounds of '77, the Spring Band Concert, and the Spring Music Festival. This year, the Jazz Band presented a concert of their own, which was very successful.

The various singing groups gave many different concerts this year. Each group had its own special performance.

The ETHS Chorus participated in several programs: the Fall Concert, the Holiday Concerts, and the Spring Festival.

Both Chorale groups and the ETHS Choir gave an outstanding performance at their annual Spring Festival, held at St. Luke's Church in Evanston.

The Choir performed a Bach Cantata with the Chamber Orchestra. Senior soloists featured at the concert were Evan Ziporyn and Dean Olson.

A new concept was also involved in the concert. For the first time in the history of voice classes at ETHS, a Triple Chorus piece was performed that incorporated the talent of both Chorales and the ETHS Choir.

Always actively involved

for the Senior Leaders are assigned to girls PE classes to help teach and assist incoming freshmen.

"You can think of yourself as a student teacher," explained one Senior Leader. "A Senior Leader doesn't just help in a gym class. She is assigned to a group of girls that are her responsibility: she must check them in, instruct them, and grade them. I think it has been a great learning experience for me."

The fact that Senior Leaders are students can be a big plus. Said Sandra Flewellen, East freshman, "They are always nice and willing to help. They've been where you've been before and they understand the many problems you might have."

Another part in the Girls' Physical Education Department is the Girls' Sports Board. A group of about ten girls, under the supervision of Ms. Henrietta Berning, planned the school's many after-school sports activities.

This year, the Girls' Sports Board was extremely active, and held meetings before and after school. "We discussed various sports events and planned a lot of activities that went on in the girls' gym area," said Sharon Chalem, co-chairperson of the Sports Board.

Eleven year checkmate

The ETHS Chess Team once again proved invincible this year—the eleventh year in succession. Under the direction and sponsorship of Mr. Samuel Sibley and Mr. Richard Rukin, the team went into nationals undefeated.

There were fifteen team members, consisting mostly of freshmen and sophomores—four of the members making up a small minority of girls. As Mr. Rukin said, "Chess tends to be perceived as male-oriented."

The team participants met twice a week to practice and discuss new tactics. A good player, according to Chess Team member Dan Lindley, can be judged by "how well he can see all possibilities and forecast his moves." Apparently, many of the Chess Team players possessed this attribute as they set the time clocks, prepared the playing boards, and competed vigorously and successfully!

Math/Bridge: educational and fun

Computers are becoming more and more important in society, as the Computer Math Club well knows. "I think that learning about computers is very important," explained one club member.

"I feel that everything I learn will be beneficial to me later," he said.

Mathletes was a new extra-curricular activity this year. At after school auditions, Mr. John Benson, sponsor, picked the most proficient math students at ETHS for competition in math contests. "I'm having a lot of fun with math," said one excited Mathlete.

While the computers were humming and the calculators clicking away, the Bridge Club met in N212 every Thursday after school to discuss their game.

Mike Lichter, a junior, liked the "chance, the luck, and the calculated risk" involved in bridge. Dana Find, West, said that bridge was like "an interesting mathematical problem . . . to try to communicate through a strict set of rules to your partner what you have in your hand and what you are going to play."

Yet, on the jovial side, of this complicated game was the fun and humor of the Bridge Club members. "Guess what our favorite movie is," asked a girl in a blue sweater, as she pulled a card from her hand. Another player turned around in his chair and smiled, "Bridge Over the River Quai."

Councils strive for perfection

Students on the different councils worked hard at achieving many goals this year. They organized numerous activities and planned a more organized structure for next year's student council.

Among the various programs set up by the student councils were the Christmas parties, the Blood Drive, and a school-wide Trashathon. The students also visited different schools to compare and contrast their problems and ideas about student council.

Students discussed the possibility of a new program for next year. The idea of having student council as a class was proposed. The two councils also felt the need to get more students involved next year. They want to give more students a chance at experiencing student council. Student council members hope that next year even more students will participate and share all the fun they had this year!

Having fun helping out

While many students were leaving school at the sound of the 3:15 bell, several girls volunteered their time to stay after school. These dedicated girls were the Timettes, official timekeepers and distance measurers during track practices and meets.

"It really is a lot of fun," said Desi Craig, a Timette. Desi went on to say that although most Timettes are very sports minded, most did not participate on the Girls' Track Team.

Another group of dedicated, sports-oriented individuals were the ETHS Aquatic Staff. Every Saturday morning from 8:30 am to 12:30 pm, the staff instructed 6-13 year olds in swimming. This way of teaching swimming gave way to a lot of individual attention.

"It's very enjoyable to see the kids progress from one stage to another," said Laura Burton, captain of the ETHS Aquatic Staff. "All of us love to work with kids. We make a sacrifice of our Saturday mornings to wake up early and spend time with future members of the ETHS swim team."

Early morning speakers

Many times during the 1976-77 school year, faithful students dragged themselves out of bed on Saturday morning to consistently win first, second, and third places in Speech Team and Debate Team Invitationals. These teams pulled themselves through a long, but satisfying year with little funding and only two coaches.

Why did students join the teams with so little going for them? "I love the competition," said one West school sophomore. Dan Parker looked at his four years with the Speech Team from a practical point of view, "I'm very interested in radio . . . the team gave me some experience in the field."

The teams fared very well with many individual trophies. This was due in part, to the hard work of coaches Mr. William Ditton and Ms. Margaret Crowley. "They were adorable," said one senior, lamenting his forthcoming departure from the teams. It was their devotion and the students' willingness to work that made the year a real success!

Journalism overcomes limitations

The Evanstonian, ETHS student newspaper, is a student publication in the truest sense of the phrase. Virtually every task involved with creating a newspaper is performed by students. The bulk of the writing is done by juniors taking journalism, and the senior editorial staff is a group of talented seniors.

According to Mr. John Reque, sponsor, the senior staff is given almost complete independence. "There is nothing they can't talk about," he explained. "I give them complete freedom within the legal limits of libel."

There are other limitations on the Evanstonian's coverage of school news, however, imposed by time and money. Time poses two major problems for the Evanstonian staff. The first is that work on the paper is extra-curricular, and research can sometimes be a problem. The other difficulty is that the Evanstonian is published bi-weekly. News that occur after one issue of the paper would be out-of-date by the time the next issue went to press.

Another limitation is the financial situation of the newspaper. The school subsidizes the paper by allocating a percentage of the budget ticket profits. However, budget ticket sales have decreased drastically and the paper had to rely more on advertising for their funds.

The scripts, the sets, the stars

Yamo Board and Yamo Script Committee, with adviser, B. K. Siewerth, worked diligently from January of 1976 through August to prepare for ETHS' fall production of "Yamo." Yamo Board held a great deal of the responsibility for the show as it was responsible for every aspect covered in "Yamo"—the writing, music, business, technical work, pantomime, and dance sequences.

Croo, under the direction of B. K. Siewerth, opened their season with "Yamo" by rebuilding the stage and incorporating the use of rear screen projection into the set. For the December production of "A Streetcar Named Desire," Croo again reconstructed the stage, and this time added to the intrigue of the set by introducing the scrim, a semi-transparent backdrop, to the Upstairs Theater.

"One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" was another triumph for Croo. They created a set which was the exact replica of a mental institution, complete with white tiled walls, linoleum floors, a glassed-in nurses station, and a flashing light board.

For the spring productions of "Let the Children Play," "The Importance of Being Ernest," and "The Pirates of Penzance," Croo built three turning discs allowing for major set changes in a short amount of time.

This year, the Latin Club celebrated Latin Week and Rome's birthday by having an authentic Roman banquet. Wearing white togas, club members enjoyed a candlelight dinner—lying down! Ms. Mary Ann Beatty, Latin club sponsor, explained that all Romans reclined during the evening meal. "It seems strange," commented one club member, "but, you have to admit, it's more comfortable."

Meeting once a month, Latin Club members enjoyed a variety of activities: a Halloween party ("not altogether Roman, but pagan just the same," explained one member), a roller skating outing, and a Christmas party, where members sang traditional carols in Latin.

New this year were the Latin T-shirts: "Latin, the 'Un' Language, I see the light."

Sue Kaplin, club member, stated that the shirts "give a feeling of comradery between club members."

Although the membership of the Israeli Culture Club is small, "the members are committed," explained Wendy Mages, club member. Members would meet every Thursday afternoon after school when they would learn more about the culture of Israel.

On December 4, Israeli Culture Day, members of the club performed three originally-choreographed dances for a number of north suburban schools. The dances were performed to popular Israeli music.

Mr. Reading Dallal, sponsor of the Israeli Culture Club, plans a small excursion to Israel in the summer.

Have you ever played the Pinata game, painted Ukranian Easter eggs, or visited the Cafe Lutz? Students involved in the various language clubs took part in several of these activities and more.

This year, the Spanish Club had an exciting Christmas party that included singing Latin American songs and playing the Pinata game. The Latin American students at school taught Spanish and native Latin American songs to everyone which enhanced the enjoyment of the party. The Pinata game, however, proved to be the most exciting activity when the pinata was finally broken and cascades of candy tumbled to the floor.

The Russian Club had an interesting visit with a Professor from Moscow. He discussed Russian students and their schools in comparison to American students and schools. The members learned a great deal of Russian life from talking with him.

The German Club enjoyed several activities, too. Among these was a dinner at a German restaurant, The Alpine Inn, and a fun filled Christmas party. According to Mr. Thomas Pool, head of the club, every year there is a tremendous turn-out of students for the German Club.

Cheerleaders cheer on victory

Cheerleaders are as essential to sports as the players themselves. That seemed to be the consensus of many ETHS cheerleaders this year as they helped cheer ETHS sports' teams to victory. Cheerleading not only means going through vigorous training for a game like school athletes, but also experiencing the elation or depression a win or loss can bring.

Cheerleaders took part in the Candy Bonanza sale during early February to help boost finances in their treasury. As one cheerleader explained, "The money we're raising is going toward new uniforms and also the special blue and orange name decals on the back of our sweaters. Who knows, if we sell a lot of candy, we might even wind up with a new Willie."

The stereotyped image of cheerleaders was fading fast from view. A cheerleader commented that all cheerleaders usually have very high grades and are members of girls' sport teams as well. "Although no boys tried out for cheerleaders," she added, "I don't think there's any rule that says cheerleaders have to be girls. We're not prejudiced."

At half time . . .

. . . the score stood three to two—and the ETHS basketball team had the lead. Suddenly, on the gym floor, appeared an orange cat dancing and hopping about. A seventh grader in the stands was entranced: Willie, the ETHS mascot, seemed to be having all the fun at the game. From that moment on, the thirteen-year-old girl longed to be a Willie. For Karen Embry, co-captain of the ETHS Willie squad, her wish finally became reality at the onset of her sophomore year.

As Melody Marion, a Willie, said, "I like to make people happy, especially kids." Joan Rettinger, a West school sophomore, put Willie into a more philosophical role, "You're kind of limited in society as to how crazy you can be, but it seems when one is in the Willie suit, all creativity can be released freely."

The Pom-pom Club, formed only two years ago at ETHS, turned the 1976-1977 year into a very eventful one for them. Not only did they perform at basketball and football games, but they won third place at the Stephenson High School Invitational.

This group of approximately forty sophomore, junior, and senior girls could be considered a dance and drill team. They combined music with movement and constantly drill on the precision and synchronization their routines demand. Their choices of music ranged all the way from Beethoven to jazz.

Though the commitment to the Pom-pom Club is a serious one: meeting three mornings a week before school, after school, and during summer vacation, all the girls enjoyed it. Also the girls commented on their director, Ms. Geneva Wade: "It seems that Ms. Wade's direction made the squad fun and exciting." Darlene Reyz, a senior, stated that Ms. Wade gave them all a lot of confidence.

PUN CLUB

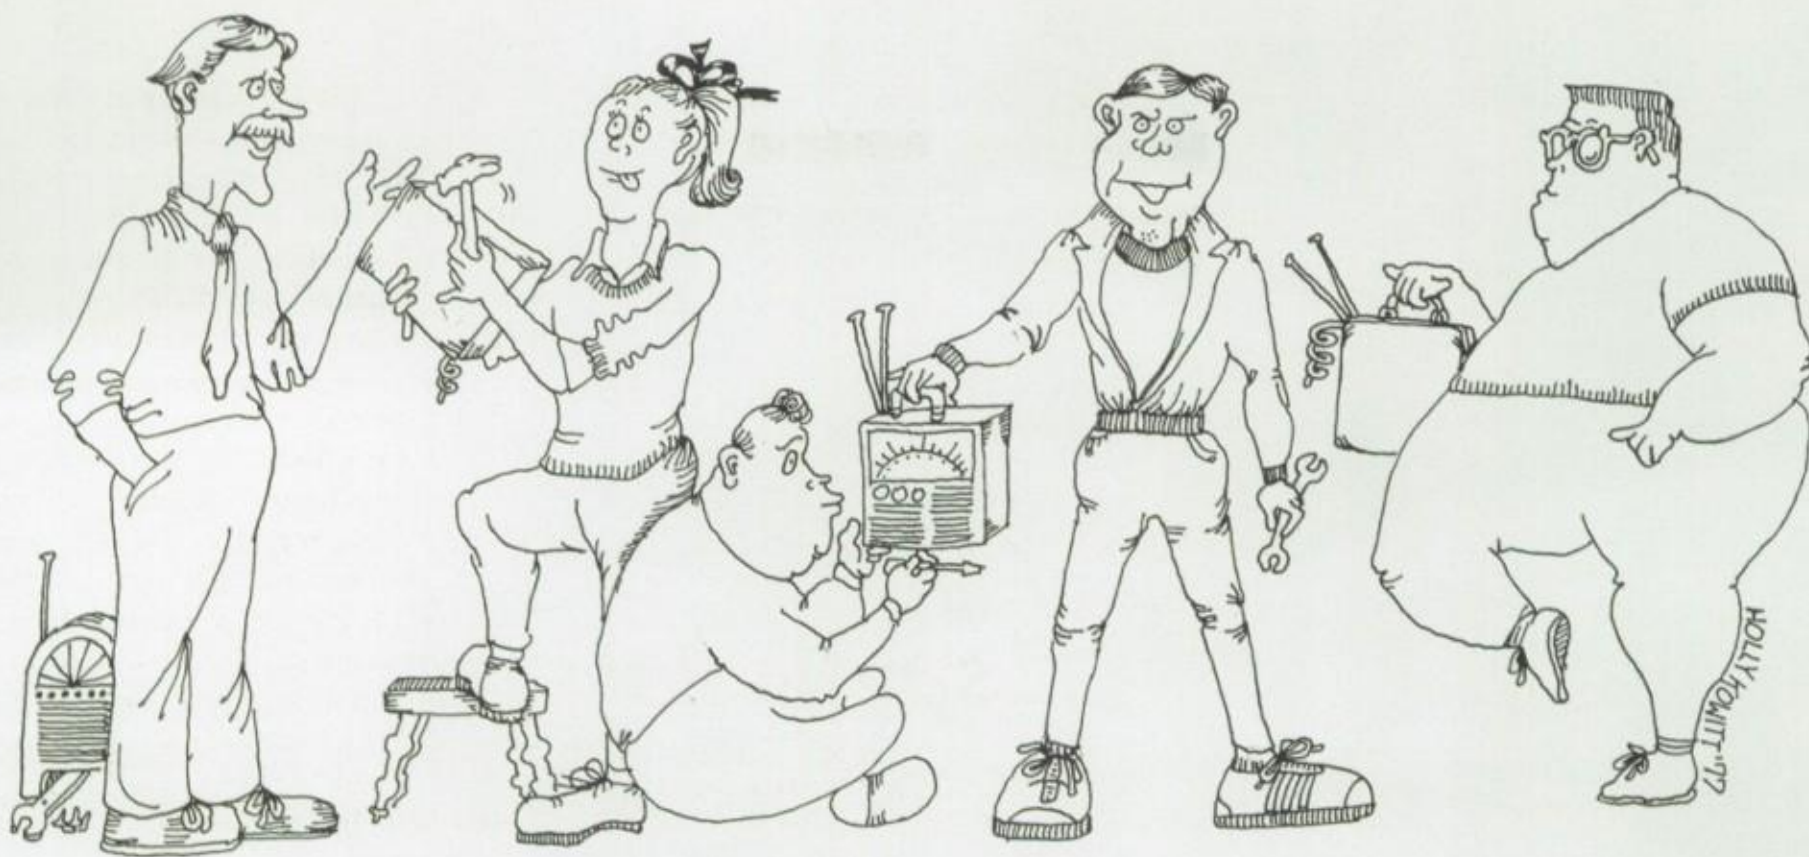

Busy club sponsors contest

During this year's wave of CB radio popularity, a new club was incorporated into the ETHS extra-curricular activities. Entitled Radio Club, it had five dedicated members who helped school security guards and local police by responding to various radio calls. To help buy radios for every member in Radio Club, its membership sold candy during ETHS' Great Candy Bonanza Sale.

The Pun Club was also very busy this year as it sponsored a school-wide contest to find the best pun at ETHS. Boxes were put in all four resource centers where students could place their entries to participate in the contest. The winner was chosen from the submitted entries, and given an honorary membership to the Pun Club.

This fall began without the traditional 10:40 am Daily Bulletin. The familiar voice saying, "Good morning, this is the Daily Bulletin," was cut from the ETHS routine when school officials felt that most students didn't listen to the announcements.

However, due to student protest, the reading of the school's announcements was resumed. "I really didn't appreciate the bulletin when it was on," revealed one West senior. "But, when the announcements were gone, I really missed them. I didn't know what activities were going on after school or what colleges were visiting or anything. I think most students felt the same as I."

When the Daily Bulletin returned, a new format was present. Male and female announcers shared the reading tasks each day, besides enlivening the five minutes with selections from a variety of artists, including Cheech and Chong and the Beach Boys.

The Science Fiction was busy this year, as usual, discussing such subjects as men from Mars, David Bowie's starring role in "The Man Who Fell to Earth," and time warps in the earth's atmosphere. "Actually, the club is a lot more fun than people think," replied one "Sci-Fi" member. "We discuss books and movies more than we try to undermine the scientific faults in things."

Playing tough is rough

Everyone knows football players have to be tough. They're really out to kill the other team.

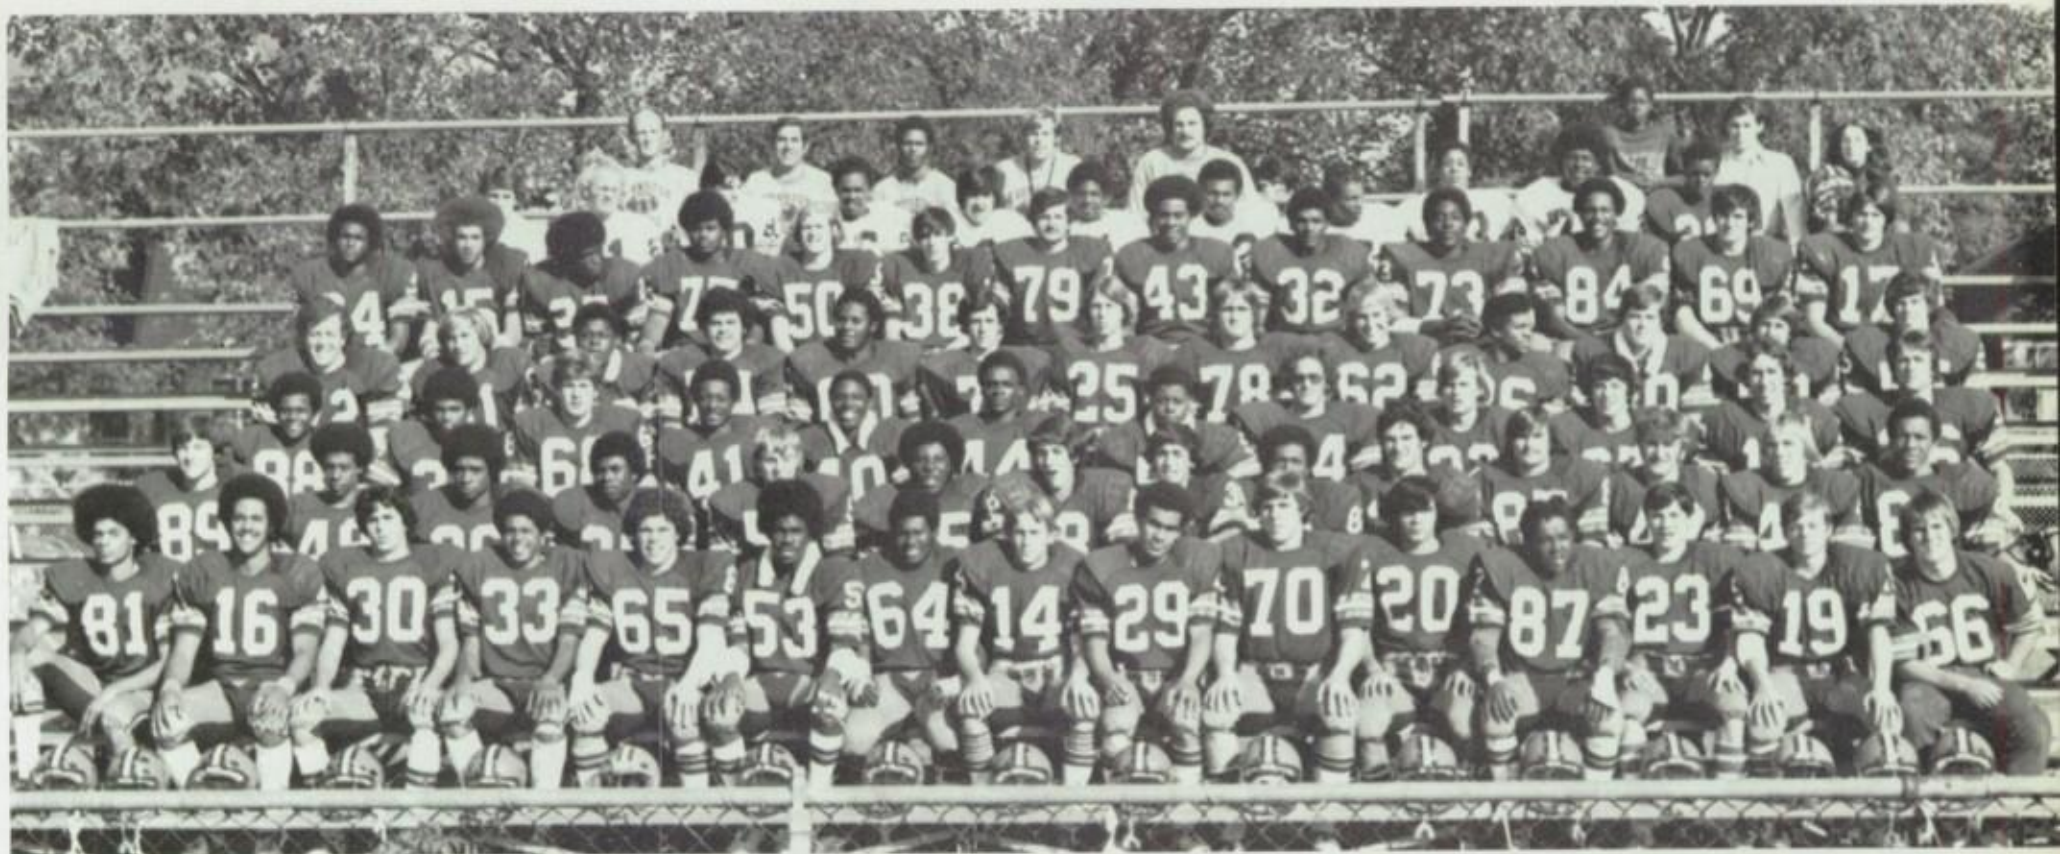

This year the Wildkits put forth a great deal of effort to play and win the game. They maintained a high majority of victories by winning six out of nine games played.

The players had a good attitude towards the game this season. A few others wanted to be more of an individual than a team member, but they proved their strength as a team. Senior player Ron Coleman explained, "Some guys wanted to be superstars, but the defense was very good throughout the games."

Coach Dick Mahoney feels that the team definitely has the potential to become even better than they are now. He was aware that he could have been harder on the team than he was. He talked about pushing more towards practices.

Both the coach and the team members worked hard at being out on the field. Certainly great potential was put to use out there.

Soccer takes CSL title

The boys' soccer team faced hard competition this year. A West senior said, "It was tough as heck." They pulled through, though, to tie for the championship with New Trier East. Mr. McGonagle, the varsity coach, said that it was an excellent season, "the most up year in soccer."

What were the thoughts of the players as they played the game? One senior said that his first thought was always, "All right, let's get the game over with and win," but then he would think, "I've just got to enjoy the game . . . our lives don't depend on whether we win or lose." An East freshman thought, "that we should win," and "to be careful of touching the ball with my hands!"

Of course, the team had to work as a whole. Steve Holmstrum, goalie on the varsity team, said that the team worked well together. A freshman noted about his team that "a lot of the kids played just to score goals and wouldn't work with the team."

Unfortunately, the soccer team had financial troubles, and was unable to renew equipment and uniforms. But Mr. McGonagle says the Booster Club has helped a great deal in contributing their services.

It really was a profitable year, though, in satisfaction, it seems.

Icemen take state

"I didn't even know ETHS had an icerink," is the usual response of students when asked about ETHS' Hockey team. Although the hockey team may not be talked about as much as other interscholastic sports teams: football, basketball, and baseball, some students are avid spectators of hockey. "Hockey is a very tense, energy-packed game," explained one student hockey fan. "It's a very invigorating sport."

Invigorating, yes—but hockey is also a game that requires a great deal of dedication of the part of the team members. "We can't have practices in the morning or right after school like other sports teams," said one hockey player on the Wildkits' team. "We practice at Robert Crown Center whenever we get the chance. But, of course, the price on the rental of the icerink can get to be pretty high."

A hockey player also has many extra expenses, too. Besides essential equipment like a pair of skates and a hockey stick, there are the special masks, gloves, and padding a hockey must wear.

"We might have had a few disappointments this year as a team, but next year I foresee great things for the ETHS Hockey team," the player concluded.

Five and four

The ETHS varsity cross country team, led by co-captains Pat Newman and Russ Weatherby, finished its 1976-77 season with a record of five wins and four losses. Being handicapped with a young and inexperienced team, only four of the ten athletes receiving varsity letters were seniors. The team was sparked by several excellent individual performances, most notably from Weatherby and Bob Jambois, who were honored by being named all conference.

Although this year's squad didn't quite recapture the tremendous success that some of his previous teams had experienced, Coach Chuck Peters wasn't at all disappointed in their performance.

Coach Peters also felt optimistic about next year when the squad will have gained a measure of maturity and experience. He is also counting on strong performances from next year's tri-captains: Jambois, Ray Kang, and Dave Trimble. The coach is also anticipating another good season with junior Peter Hsia and several promising underclassmen, including sophomores Sam Evans and Bruce Weertman, who won the Evanston and Woodstock Invitational races.

Golf, polo formidable contenders

Do you consider water polo and golf "real" sports?

In 1966 water polo was only offered as an intramural activity. By 1971, though, it had become a varsity sport, with ETHS being state champs their first and second year of competition. This year's team ranked among the top ten in the state. Bruce Burton, water polo coach, stated, "They're a fine group of sophomores who will be state champs as seniors." There are many factors that add a touch more finesse and excitement to swimming in water polo. It is an endurance sport, requiring considerable swimming ability, not to mention keeping a strong defense and offense. So, it seems natural that most water polo team members are competitive swimmers first, then become water polo players. Some players even complained of not having enough time in the pool to practice.

Another team with a great amount of dedication is the ETHS golf team. The team itself is not very large: seven varsity and seven junior-varsity members. Unlike most teams, these players practice on their own with no set time schedule or plan. Tom Ferguson, captain of the boys golf team, described golf more as "a game against yourself" rather than an opposing player or team.

On their way to a tournament, the team's primary thoughts are, "You gotta beat your man; you gotta beat your course." And they definitely did so, winning in competition against Niles West, Maine North and others. Dobbie Burton, golf team coach, said that these students are fortunate to be playing so early in life as many may never have enough time or dedication later on. As Dan Olson, next year's golf team captain, explained, "I wanted to do something different. The game is a challenge, as well as an enjoyment."

Sinking to success

This year's basketball season was an exciting one for both the Wildkits and the Wildkittens.

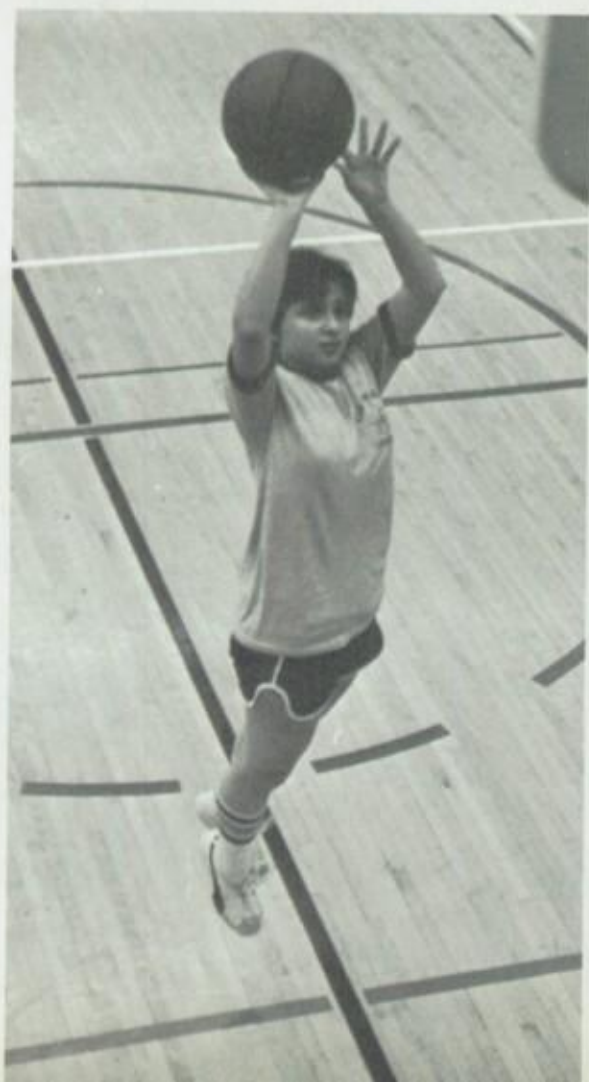

The girls showed tremendous improvement from previous years of playing. The coach, Ms. Alice Simpson, stated that, "it was definitely the best team we've had over the four years of its existence." She regretted having to part with the senior players; "they will really be hard to replace." The quality and dedication that each player showed was outstanding. The spectators received a more professional game this season, because of the girls' tremendous dedication to the game. According to Ms. Simpson, the team could appreciate the skill involved more this year than in the past.

The Wildkits drew overwhelming crowds. A look at the scores explain their popularity. One of the team's biggest rivals, New Trier East, took a good beating. The Wildkits fought hard by taking victories over their opponents. Some other impressive scores were those of the big tournaments: the Wildkits placed second at the regional competition and fourth in the Centralia Holiday Tourney.

Practice amounts to success

The swimmer was standing on the diving platform, waiting for the gun to signal the start. He was concentrating on putting everything into the race. The shot goes off, and he is off, cutting through the water smoothly and gracefully. There was hard work behind that one race and many others; no one on the Boys Swim Team was spared the agony of it.

Work-outs were every morning for two hours and every afternoon for two hours. Dobbie Burton, head coach of the team, gave them their warm-ups, their tips on how to improve, and their motivation to do their best. Members of the team professed that Coach Burton was an "excellent coach"—"the most respected man in school."

The team worked hard at practices this year, devoting a large chunk of their everyday lives to the Swim Team. Was it worth it? When a race ended in a win, it was. Steve Sally, East freshman, said that winning "feels wonderful . . . you feel like all that work isn't a lost cause." Even for the satisfaction and the sense of accomplishment gained from being a participant on the team, "You want to kill yourself and work hard," stated Eddie Cheng, East School. "It's a good feeling when you get through and it's eight o'clock in the morning, and you've done your best," he concluded.

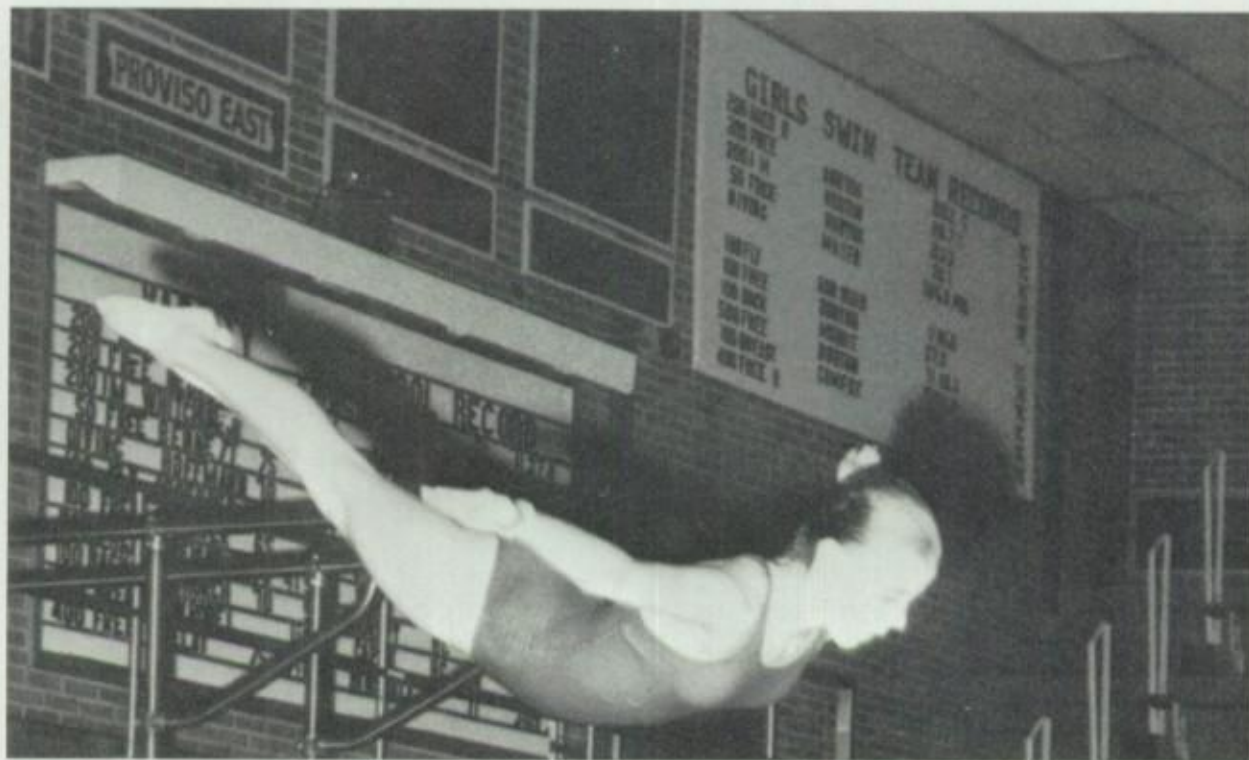

The Boys Swim Team undoubtedly did their best as they placed third in State Districts.

Over 70 girls swam on the ETHS Girls Swim Team. These dedicated individuals spent every Saturday, during the season, practicing at the natatorium to get in shape against such tough opponents as New Trier East and Maine South. Swim team member Pam Catoire credited the team's successful season to hard work on the part of the girls and coach, Ms. Leandra Mitrovic.

A good year

On the whole, the Boys' Gymnastic Team had a wonderful season: the varsity team winning seven out of ten meets and the freshmen team, walking away victoriously with all eight meets. The varsity team also placed first in the north divisional meet, and third in districts. The heaviest contenders for the team were Hersey, Glenbrook South, and Niles North.

The Girls' Gymnastic Team felt proud as one of their own teammates was nominated the Outstanding Senior Girl Gymnast of the Year in Illinois. The honor went to Meg Davis.

"Overall, said Ms. Vicki Munch, coach of the team, "we had a fantastic season. Although, taking fourth in the state meet was a letdown."

The team, which added 16 new members this year, won their conference and district meets with ease. Five gymnasts advanced to state competition, including Ruth Lawrence, a vaulter, who took 12th place in the finals.

The girls were also given new pieces of practicing equipment because of their great wins in competition. A new set of uneven bars, a padded leather balance beam, a vaulting runway, and two springboards were added to the gym.

"It was a long, productive year," said Marty Traxler. "I can only be optimistic towards next year."

Wrestlers: flying over obstacles

The Varsity, Junior Varsity, and Freshman Wrestling teams all had their struggles this year, but they still managed to somehow wrestle through the season. The teams worked hard throughout the winter and many members of the teams were given awards at the annual Winter Sports Award Ceremony.

Size may have been a factor in the teams' performance, commented head coach Elias George. "Our team was very small in stature this year and they had to work extremely hard." As East School junior Peter Andrews stated, "Wrestling is the toughest sport . . . the pressure is always so great."

Despite the apparent obstacles of the team, coach George is very optimistic about next year. "They're looking forward to a winning season," he said.

Kits go down state, take second

The girls' track team had a super year, winning four out of five league meets and finishing second in the state tournament, losing by one one point to state champion East Moline. The team was also proud of the fact that team member Pam Page was chosen as the Outstanding Chicago-Area High School Athlete.

This year's state tournament had over 1,300 girls from 305 different high schools competing in track events. The Evanston Kits qualified to participate in 10 out of the 16 events held at Eastern Illinois University over the weekend of May 25th.

Coach Karen Huff eagerly looks forward to next year when the chances of winning the state title will be even more promising. As she commented, "I think we have a good chance of winning."

The boys' indoor track team also had a fine season: eight wins and no losses. The Boys placed second in both the Evanston Relays and the Bloom Invitational, while winning the championship of the CSL North Division meet.

Kits strike out

Due to an upset early in the season, the boys' varsity baseball team had a disappointing year. However, one team member explained, "We tried our hardest as a team, but we just couldn't win against New Trier." Another player added, "I think everybody was disappointed, but we knew it was just a bad break. We played very well together as a team."

Coach Ken McGonagle also stressed the fact that the boys were a good team. One reason might be pitcher Harry Eberts. Harry not only won the Boosters Club Excellence Award in Baseball this year, but also received the Leo J. Samuelson Trophy for excellence in athletics and the David Richards Trophy for excellence in baseball.

Star player Carol Dunphy received the Boosters Club Excellence Award for softball in the Girls' Division.

Netters have player power

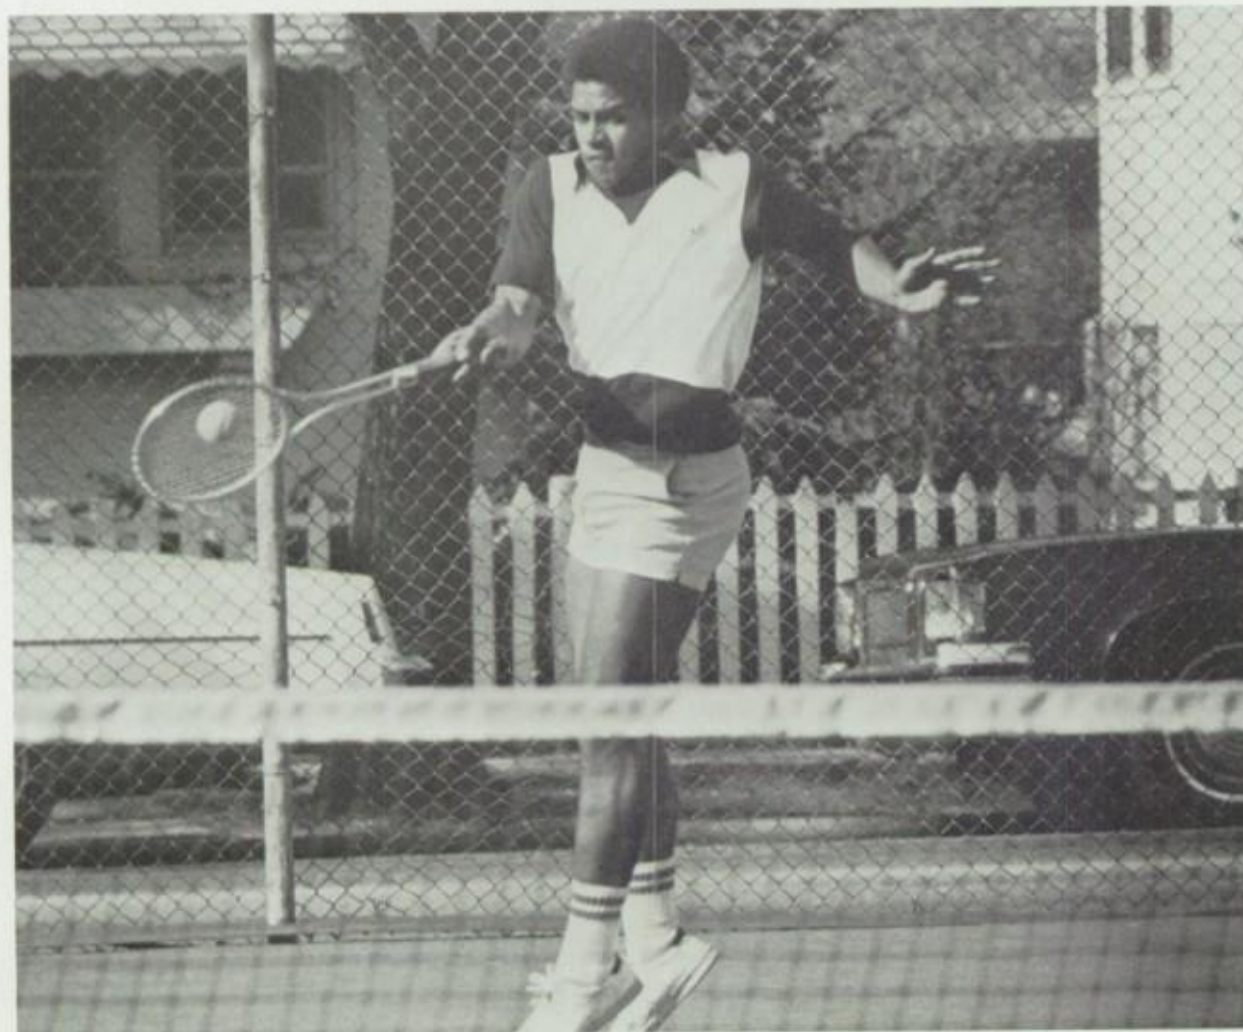

The tennis season certainly proved victorious for Evanston this year. The girls' tennis team had a varsity record of 7 and 2. According to Ms. Alice Simpson, tennis coach, the team possessed the most depth and outstanding players it's ever had. She exclaimed, "It was the strongest team we've had for about four years."

Besides the tremendous winning season, the team also qualified a player for the State Finals. Sandy Deane, senior, achieved second place in the Districts and played in the State competition.

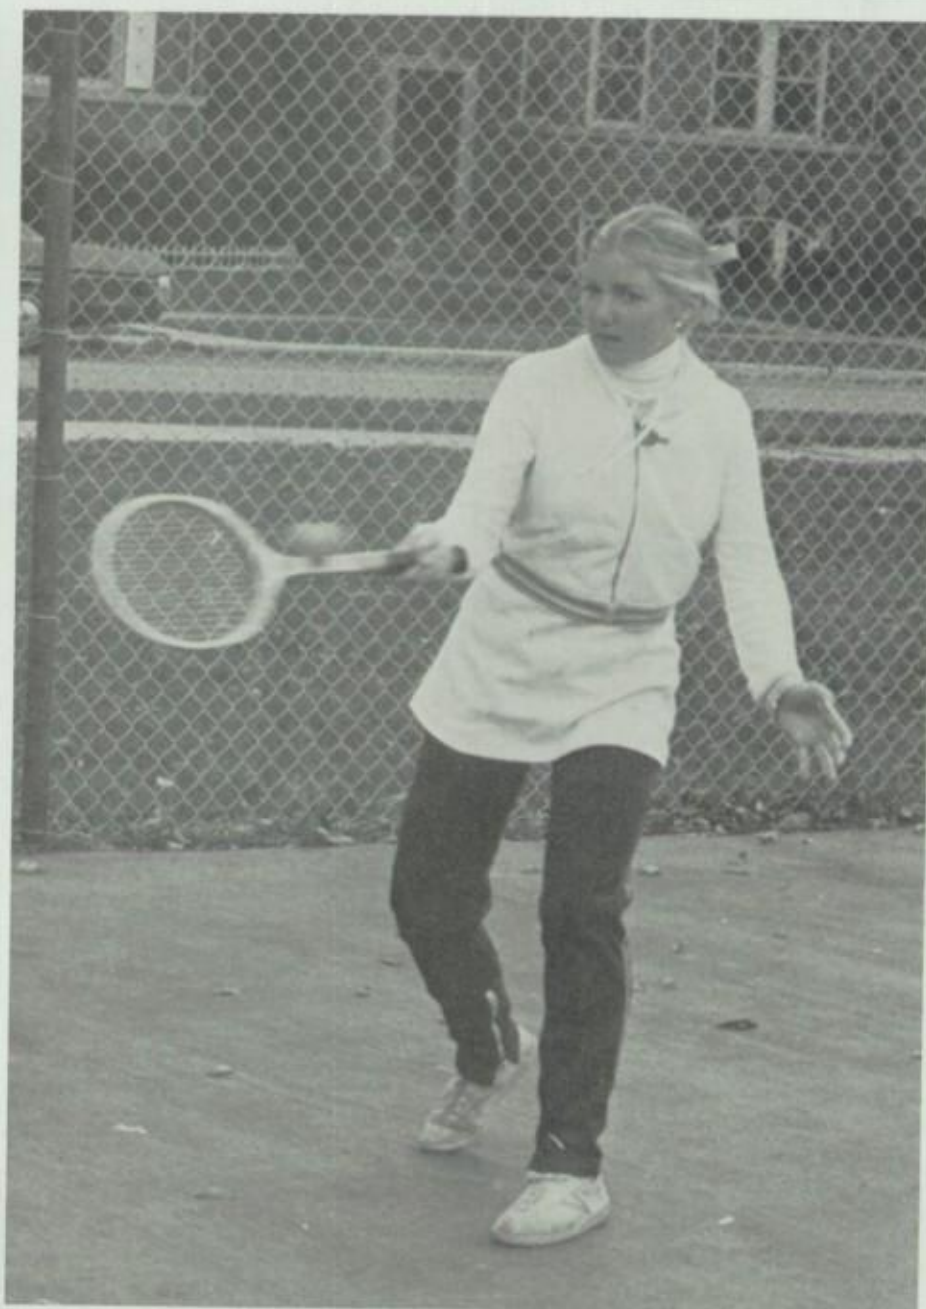

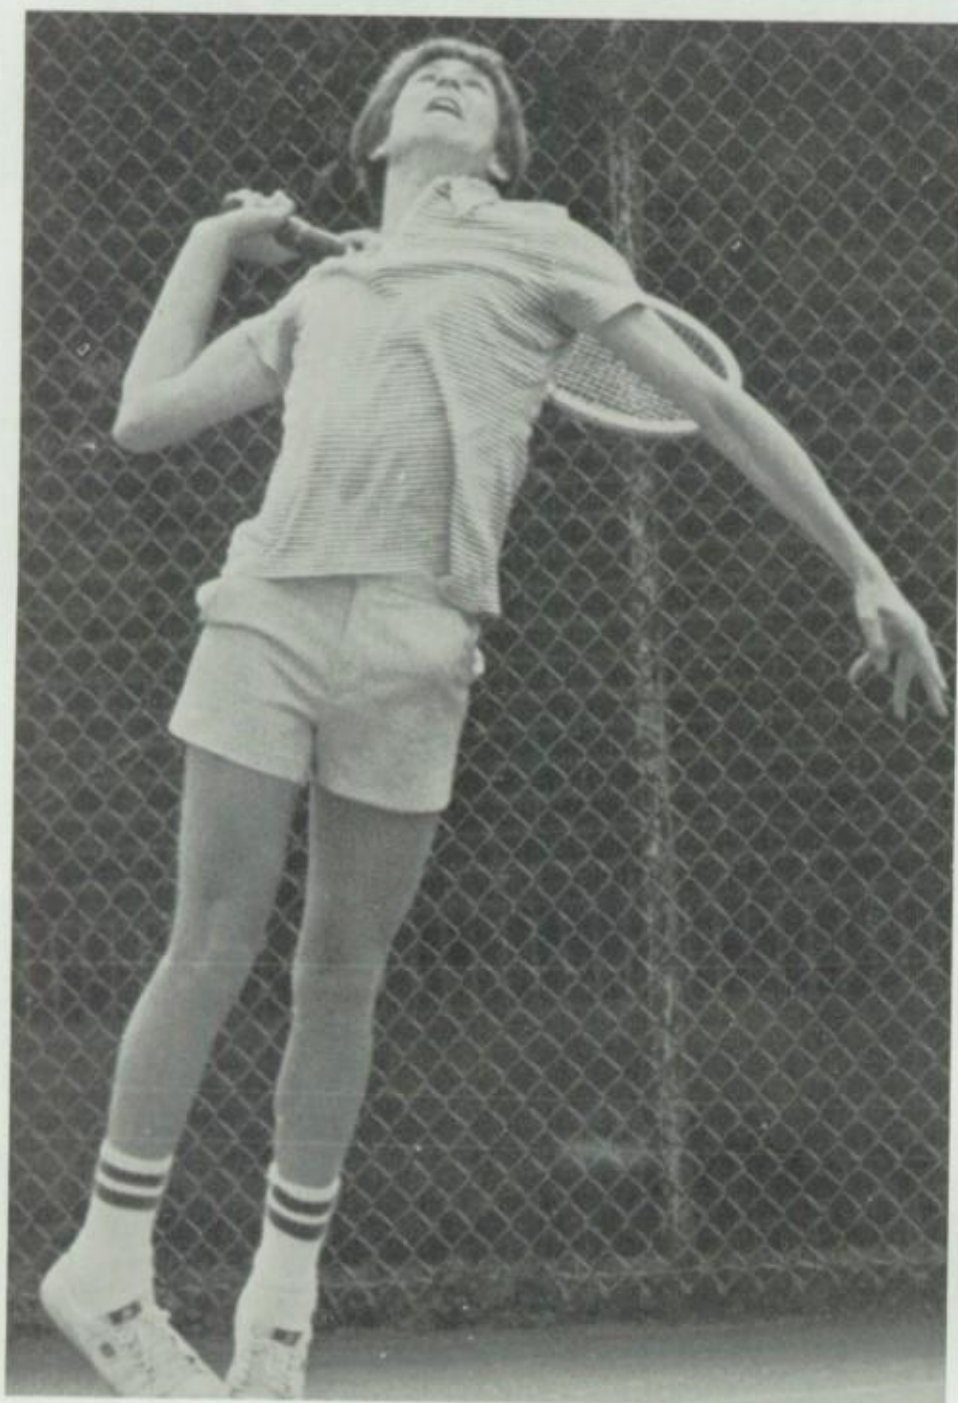

There was also more spirit among the team this year than ever before. The coach felt that more players worked together. Fern Shapiro, senior player, added, "It was more of a team this year."

The boys tennis team also had a terrific season as they finished with nine wins and only two losses. Coach Keith Andersen predicts that next year will also be a lucky one for the Kits as almost the entire team is expected to be back. Only one player, senior Richard Lewis, will not be in the lineup for next season.

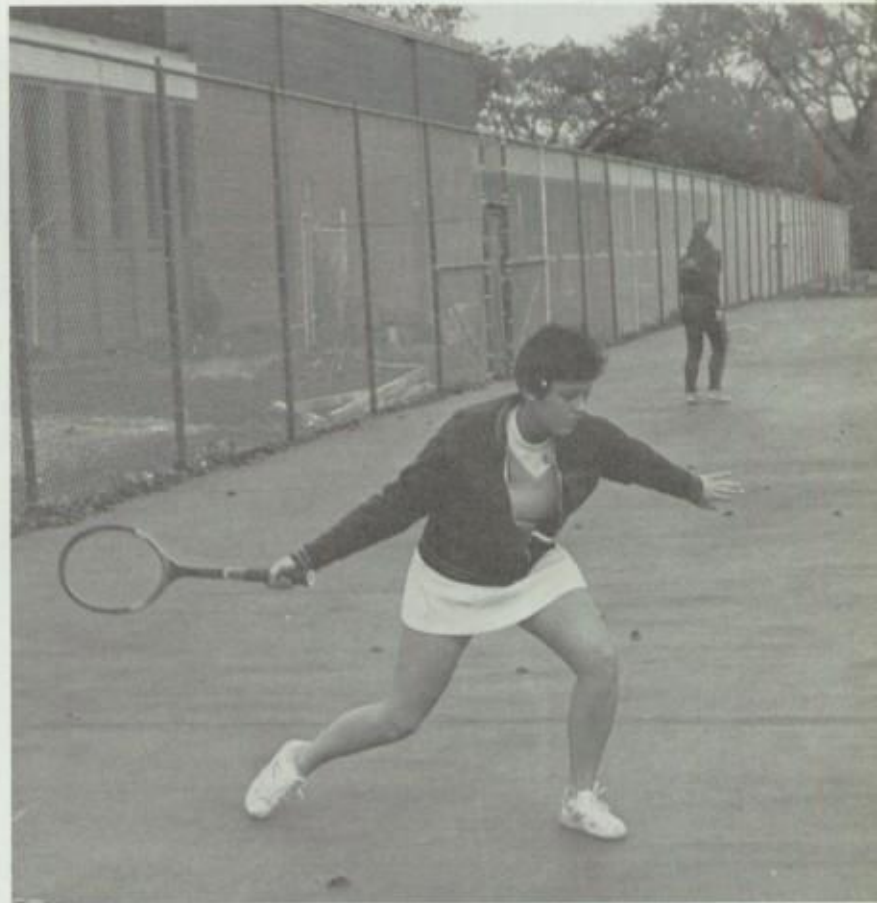

Two big upsets of the netters were the total upheaval of District meets and the loss of one top player, Bill Schmidt, due to injury. However, the Kits pulled through with many fine victories, including Barrington, Maine East, Lake Forest, and New Trier East.

Ruggers are all friends

Many people have the wrong impression of rugby. It is an extremely physical game, but also involves a great deal of friendliness and consideration on the field. One rugby player, Doug Simpson, said, "When everybody gets into the game, we function well as a team." Coach Bruce Mitchell explained that the game of rugby requires plenty of physical contact, but not complete rivalry. He stated, "The game is greater than the score." Coach Mitchell went on to say that unlike other sports, after a game is finished both teams get together to socialize.

The highlight of this year's season was the Midwest Rugby Tournament. The tournament included several local schools, as well as teams from Winnipeg, Canada and St. Paul, Minnesota. A total of twenty games were played over the tournament weekend. To the amazement of spectators, the weekend had no major injuries on the field.

The interest in rugby is rapidly increasing at ETHS, as it is all over the world. Next year, ETHS might challenge teams all the way from South Africa and Balta.

Practice makes perfect

The Volleyball Team practiced daily after school from the beginning of November to the end of December, preparing themselves for the competitive games to be played during the volleyball season.

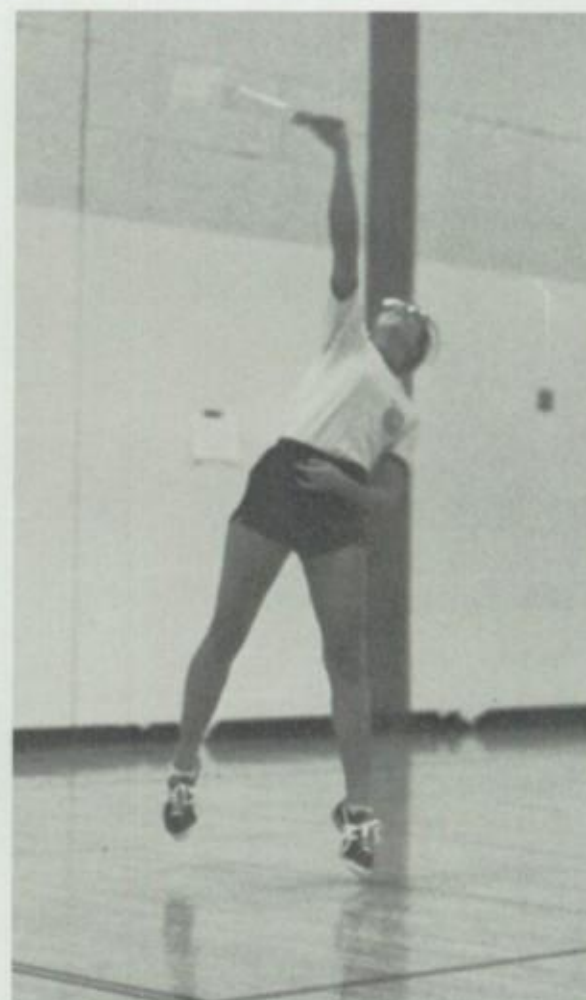

Mary Fischl, varsity team captain, and Desire Craig, junior varsity team captain, were in full charge of their teams most of the time, with guidance from coach Inga Peterman. The captains each ran their own practices and had the team members prepare each other for their games. They were their own critics and consequently, practices didn't always run smoothly.

"At times," team member Natasha Sankovitch said, "there were personal conflicts we had to contend with." However, when the team did well, it was a rewarding feeling. As Desire Craig said, "When the team won, the kids knew that they had done it by themselves for themselves."

The Badminton Team practiced long hours after school to get in shape for the season. This practicing paid off as singles player Sandy Deane captured the district's singles championship, and proceeded to the state tournament held at New Trier West.

Intramurals: a quiet popularity

Just how important are intramurals at ETHS? This question was asked to a variety of students, and most replied, "not very."

"I think," began one West senior, "that the present intramural program is a joke. The really competitive athletes join the school teams to participate in sports with other schools. I think the idea of completing against other students from ETHS is passé."

But as Sharon Chalem, co-chairman of the Girls' Sports Board explained, "It's fun because you don't have to worry about winning or losing."

Despite opinions held by most students, the intramural program at ETHS was very active this year. Just some of the after school activities included basketball, swimming, badminton, and volleyball.

The average person who comes to intramurals enjoys sports. Some students practice for teams while others go because they can't participate with a team. Still others go just to have fun.

Participating in intramural activities can be beneficial to both the individual and his/her school. The student is awarded points every time he/she participates. At the end of the year, there is an awards ceremony for the participants.

Sharon Chalem was disappointed that not enough students realized that there are a lot of fun things to do after school.

Time for senior reflections

With prom bids going at $10 a couple and the Evanstonian predicting that it would cost $143 for two people to attend the prom, one could expect a meager turn-out for the senior class' last big get-together before college. However, nothing was further from the truth.

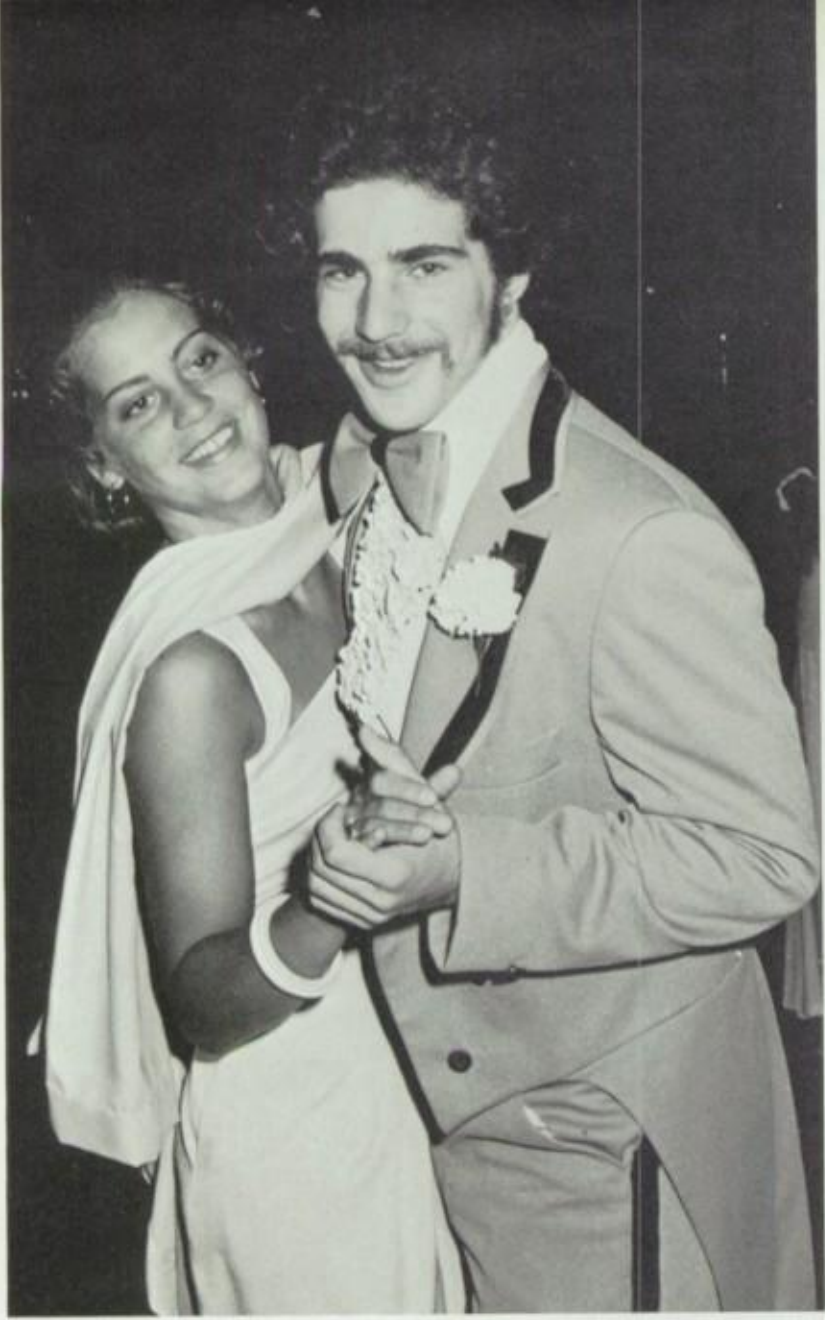

Adorned in pastel silks, cottons, and crepe de chines, couples made their way to the Palmer House on the evening of June 9th. Although a live band was present earlier in the evening, most people began dancing after disco records were played. "It's just easier to dance to," remarked one senior.

The Class of '77 was the first to graduate in two separate commencement programs. East School held its graduation commencement at 4:00 pm on Wednesday, June 15th, while West School had its program at 8:00 pm the same day.

East School's seniors marched onto the auditorium stage to the traditional, "Pomp and Circumstance." Principal Ray Anderson gave the welcoming address to the graduating seniors and their relatives and friends in the audience. East School's graduation program offered a variety of entertainment; some of the highlights being: a dance ("Dance") by Tobi Augustiny, a musical number ("Concerto in G Major") by Reva Kleppel and Sharon Slaughter, a speech ("Memories of High School") by Debra Cooper, and chorale pieces ("Sing to the Lord" and "Wrap Your Troubles in Dreams") by the East School Singers.

The program planned for the West School graduation commencement was also varied. Daniel Greenberger welcomed the many parents and friends of the graduates to the program. Rachel Anderson spoke about adjusting to high school life in a hilarious speech entitled, "Adjusting—The Most Important Skill." Tammy Gearing performed, "I will Never Pass This Way Again," and Alice Lipowicz gave her rendition of "A Dance—Just Footling Around."

Mr. Bob Moorhead, our representative from Walsworth Publishing.

Mr. Ron Kirsch and Mr. Dick Dickus, our representatives from American Photography.

Mr. Robert Roth, our advisor, whose patience, understanding, and sense of humor helped us survive many problems and who put up with a "unique brand of humor" for an unusually long time.

Mr. Pujals for his time and help in computerizing our index.

Peggy Robinson, for her outstanding artistic efforts, and for time spent creating the division pages.

Mr. Larry Watts, of the Evanston Review, for all his help in compiling pictures for the sports section.

Mrs. Nadine Pool, for her artistic advice and inspiration.

Many thanks to Barb Barrow and Ellyn Pildes, without whose humor and diligence we could not have survived those fifteen hour week-end days.

Diane and Harry . . .
